Roosevelt Says People Do Not Realize Nation Has War To Win

Quotes Abraham Lincoln and Draws Parallel from Statement Made during the Civil War

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—By quoting Abraham Lincoln and drawing a parallel, President Roosevelt said indirectly but nonetheless clearly today that the people do not realize this nation has a war to win, and that "hard, tough fighting" will be necessary to win it.

Moreover, he said that the war would, if necessary, continue through 1943 and he disclosed that a new survey of prospective defense deliveries as contrasted with the needs of England, Russia and China had been ordered.

The chief executive was holding his first press conference since his sea-meeting with Winston Churchill, the British prime minister, and the first since the House, by a bare one-vote margin, approved the idea of keeping draftees and others in the army beyond the periods for which they were originally inducted.

Distributes Quotation The Lincoln quotation and what he considered its aptness to the present situation had impressed him deeply because he had it copied and made ready for distribution to the correspondents.

It was an excerpt from Carl Sandburg's "Abraham Lincoln—The War Years," and told of an interview between Lincoln and a group of women, led by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore of Chicago. It happened a year after the Civil War began. The excerpt follows:

"I have no word of encouragement to give," was the slow, blunt, reply (of President Lincoln). "The military situation is far from bright; and the country knows it as well as I do."

"The women were silent. They knew it was a heart-to-heart talk, that he was telling them what he could not well tell the country, that he was frankly relieving the burden of an over-weighted mind. It was a silence of a moment, but 'deep and painful,' said Mrs. Livermore.

"The president went on: 'The fact is the people have not yet made up their minds that we are at war with the South. They have not buckled down to the determination to fight this war through; for they have got the idea into their heads that we are going to get out of this fix somehow by strategy! That's the word—strategy! General McClellan thinks he is going to whip the Rebels by strategy; and the army has got the same notion. They have no idea that the war is to be carried on and put through by hard, tough fighting, that it will hurt somebody; and no headway is going to be made while this delusion lasts.'"

Mr. Roosevelt read the excerpt to the correspondents, paused and said (Continued on Page 7, Col. 3)

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 19 (AP)—Justice Frank Murphy of the Supreme Court of the United States told the Knights of Columbus to-night that Russia, despite its Communism, should have the support of democracies in its fight with Germany.

In a speech prepared for 1,500 delegates representing 419,000 members of this Catholic fraternity, Justice Murphy asserted the Nazis constituted a greater threat to the church than did the Communists.

"For men and women who cherish freedom of religion and the other fundamentals of democratic life," said the jurist, "there is little to choose between the Communism of Soviet Russia and the Nazism of Germany. We want neither in this country."

"But we know that Nazism, with its superior competence and perverted intelligence, its extraordinary energy and missionary zeal, its profound belief in racial superiority and destiny, its fanatical intolerance, and above all, its tremendous military power and skill, by far the greater menace to the rights and free institutions. It is at present the real menace."

Justice Murphy said a report of (Continued on Page 7, Col. 8)

Senators Charge FDR Commits U. S. To War Policy

Barkley Denies Statement Made by Johnson and Clark

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Charges were made and denied in the Senate today that President Roosevelt had committed the United States to a policy of war in his historic conference with Winston Churchill.

Senator Hiram Johnson (R-Calif.) charged that the eight-point statement of Anglo-American peace aims issued by the prime minister and the president could be carried out only by war.

Senator Clark (D-Mo.), his voice ringing, said that if the president had promised that the United States would go to war "then the president of the United States exceeded his constitutional authority."

Barkley Is Spokesman Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky, heatedly replied that the statement was not a "military commitment in any sense of the word." He denied that the president had violated the constitution.

Barkley served as spokesman for congressional leaders who yesterday received a report from the president on the conference at sea.

Barkley started the discussion when he took the floor to assail a published report that the president and Churchill had discussed sending an American Expeditionary Force to aid England in invading Germany.

"No such matter was discussed or intimated, or even hinted at," Barkley continued. Answering questions of Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) he added that while he could not speak for the president he believed that no commitments involving the United States had been made to Churchill.

"I take issue with that," Johnson interrupted, adding that it was as "plain as the nose on a man's face" that a pledge of peace and liberty for the world "after defeat of Nazism" could involve this country in war.

British Reporters Present Senator Clark said that British reporters were allowed at the sea conference while newspapermen from this country were barred. He quoted the British press as reporting that commitments were made "for almost immediate entry of the United States into war" and for an expeditionary force in the future.

"If any commitments were made upon a British battleship in the zone of war, then the president of (Continued on Page 7, Col. 1)

Soviet Command Admits Nazi Troops Have Reached The Vicinity of Novgorod

Stubborn Battles Reported at Odessa on Black Sea and in Gomel Area

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Aug. 20.—Entrenched in new positions after falling back fifty miles deeper into Russia on the Leningrad front, the Red Army was reported battling a mammoth German encircling movement from the South and Southwest today against the Soviet Union's second largest city.

The deepest Nazi penetration on this front was announced officially to have reached to the vicinity of Novgorod, 100 miles South of Leningrad and thirty miles Northeast of Leningrad, where the previous heavy fighting had been reported.

Communications Are Intact Novgorod, on the North shore of Lake Ilmen, is some forty miles West of the main Leningrad-Moscow rail line and the Red Army command apparently was making a determined stand to smash the threat to this line. Communications between the two cities still were intact today.

The Germans admittedly had Marshal Klement Voroshilov's defenders in this area under the heaviest pressure.

The communiqué also reported stubborn battles at Odessa, on the Black sea, and in the Gomel and Central front 140 miles North of Kiev. Kingsepp, from which Russian troops have withdrawn is seventy-five miles Southwest of Leningrad.

A high command statement that fighting continued on the entire front indicated that wherever Russian troops were falling back the retreat was orderly.

The new German advance toward Novgorod appeared to be part of a two-pronged drive on Leningrad. The column at Kingsepp was nearest the city but German troops in the Novgorod area apparently were trying to get into position to cut Leningrad off from Moscow in (Continued on Page 7, Col. 2)

As to the incident of the President Coolidge, he said that at first the United States Embassy had asked permission to send twenty-two officials home on the liner, and that the Japanese had agreed. Then he added, the embassy asked that a larger number of Americans be allowed to embark on the same ship.

"This," he said, "was contrary to a past promise. We could not accept. The Coolidge question is only (Continued on Page 7, Col. 1)

Concern Is Expressed Just what was involved was left in doubt, but in another contention the Japanese generally continued to express concern over United States aid to Russia. Ishii himself stated that Japan could not remain indifferent to such help.

Must Meet Threat "Day by day the threat of aggression becomes sharper. Surely we must prepare. Every hour's delay is fraught with greater danger. Now, not tomorrow, we must highly resolve to meet this threat by toll and sacrifice."

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, on leave from duty, made his first public address on war issues. He urged a "spontaneous talk, a spontaneous awakening of all the people, determined on unity, sweat and sacrifice, exactly as if we were fighting a shooting war."

"Either we become the Citadel of Liberty," he declared, "or we (Continued on Page 7, Col. 3)

Japan Is Holding British Subjects Who Try To Leave

Meeting Same Frustrations as Americans; Situation Complicated

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Aug. 19.—British subjects trying to leave Japan are meeting the same frustrations as are Americans. It was learned today as the whole subject became more and more complicated.

Responding to the official American statement that Japan had given no satisfactory explanation of the refusal to permit 100 United States citizens to leave aboard the liner President Coolidge, a Japanese government spokesman disclaimed any intention to hold Americans as hostages.

The spokesman, Koh Ishii, declared that the question of American aid depended upon certain "inconveniences" in Japanese-American relations, but implied that these did not involve trade, political or other international issues.

Medical Experts Strive To Learn More about Infantile Paralysis One of Most Promising Research Projects in Years Is Started

By WILLIS YOUNG CHICAGO, Aug. 19 (AP)—Medical men here have caught an outbreak of infantile paralysis in the act, so to speak, and have hastily begun one of the most promising research projects in years.

The study is the only one of its kind in the United States and, considering ideal conditions that were found, it appears to be the best opportunity ever presented to learn more about transmission of the disease in humans.

Under investigation is an outbreak of poliomyelitis in La Grange, La Grange Park and Western Springs, all Western Chicago suburbs.

Starting with a single case, the disease spread within four weeks to fourteen other people. Because the communities were small and the spread slow, doctors were able to trace it from one person to another. The outbreak was close to Chicago (Continued on Page 7, Col. 3)

200,000 Men Will Be Released by Army by End of The Present Year

Selectees and Guardsmen Will Serve an Average of Less than Eighteen Months, Officials Say

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Selectees and national guardsmen will be held in service an average of less than eighteen months, instead of the thirty-month hitch authorized by law, the army announced today.

Military sources said the statement, which also asserted that almost 200,000 selectees, guardsmen and others would be released before Christmas, should give a pronounced "lift" to troop morale.

The scheduled releases are subject to the condition that "this country does not become more involved in the international situation." However, the hope was expressed that it would not be necessary to hold any individual now in training for the full term permissible under the service extension bill signed by President Roosevelt yesterday.

New Appointment Made The army statement, coupled with the unusual announcement that a civilian, Frederick H. Osborn of New York City, would become chief of the army morale branch with the rank of brigadier general, was regarded as evidence of an effort by army leaders to end criticism that morale in many army camps was at low ebb.

Mr. Roosevelt sent to the Senate the nomination of General Osborn, a corporation executive and social scientist as successor to Brigadier General James A. Ulio, General Ulio. It was stated, will undergo an operation shortly which will keep him from active duty for several months.

Almost 200,000 trainees, guardsmen and officers of the reserve and national guard who were brought into federal service before the end of 1940 will be "out of the trenches by Christmas." "Dependency and hardship cases," trainees who were twenty-eight or older on July 1 and married men who ask releases will be discharged in that order of priority.

Other selectees and guardsmen will be released "after an average of about eighteen months' total active service, some as early as fourteen months," the department said.

Must Seek Release Those to be released before Christmas must make applications to their commanding officers. It was also specified that men would not be released while their units were participating in maneuvers or other special training, except in case of emergency. Enlisted trainees and guardsmen who wish to remain in service longer than twelve months may do so either by enlisting for a three-year "hitch" in the regular army or by voluntarily extending their training to the full thirty months permitted by law.

Crowds Greet Churchill The time and place of Churchill's arrival had not been announced. Nevertheless, a crowd was there when he bounded off the train which brought him from the port at which the battleship Prince of Wales had landed him yesterday.

High military officials and cabinet members, a bit red-eyed from arising at an unaccustomed hour, were waiting on the platform, and so were several hundred ordinary citizens.

United States Ambassador John G. Winant tried vainly to get through Mrs. Churchill's way in a purple suit and gray furs, greeted her husband with "Mr. Winant is here."

Churchill, puffing his big cigar like a destroyer under forced draught, elbowed through to greet the ambassador. In passing he commended A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty for the navy's handling of the Atlantic voyage.

Virginia Senator Declares Social Gains Must Yield To Rearmament Effort

Says America Has Capacity in Labor and Raw Materials to Outproduce any Other Nation in Production of Mechanized Equipment; Asserts Nation Has Failed Miserably in Past Two Years

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Senator Byrd (D-Va.) today demanded a complete reorganization of the defense production system and told the Senate that "social gains" and "everything else" must yield to the rearmament effort.

"America has the capacity in labor and raw materials to outproduce any other nation in the production of mechanized equipment," he said. "In that job for the past two years we have failed and miserably failed, and the sooner we as a nation realize it the better we can remedy our mistakes and go forward."

He called for the suspension of the forty-hour work-week and the substitution of a full week working basis. Moreover, he charged that not a single army camp has an adequate supply of military equipment.

Confusion, due to conflicting and overlapping authority exists to such a degree at Washington as virtually to stymie the whole defense program," he said.

The entire defense program should be placed under a single head, he asserted.

Meanwhile, it developed that President Roosevelt had appointed Judge Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York State Supreme Court to make a study of differences of opinion that have arisen between OPM and OPAC.

Reports of an impending reorganization of the defense production system persisted meanwhile. Under one rumored plan, a general policy making board would be established.

Byrd said that since the beginning of the European war the nation had spent nearly $10,000,000,000 for national defense, yet up until now no anti-aircraft gun or tank had come to England and but few merchant ships had been sent.

The Virginia gave this picture of production in various categories of armament.

Tanks—"After two years, our tank production up-to-date is practically negligible."

Anti-aircraft guns—"Today, all of the anti-aircraft guns of modern design we have could not protect effectively a single city in the United States. In this vital weapon our two-year production has been negligible."

Two Ocean Navy Needed The navy—"We need desperately (Continued on Page 7, Col. 4)

Eight Persons Die In Airliner Crash Near Sao Paulo

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Aug. 19 (AP)—Eight persons were killed, two were injured seriously, and three slightly in the crash of a Panair do Brasil liner on a mountain peak fifteen miles south of here yesterday, rescue parties reported to-night.

The only North Americans aboard the plane, Prof. Philip C. Jessup of New York and Hugh Davies of Harrisburg, Pa., reached a Sao Paulo suburb late today along with David Novak, the plane's steward. The three suffered only minor injuries.

Davies had telephoned that he, Jessup and the steward tried for an hour to extricate the others and finally gave up on the assumption they were dead. A rescue party reaching the scene of the crash this evening said they found two of the remaining ten persons on board seriously injured.

Jessup's all-night struggle through the jungle in an attempt to reach aid for fellow passengers was told by Prof. Frederick S. Dunn of Yale University who arrived with Mrs. Jessup and Philip Jessup Jr., by air from Assisima.

Jessup and Davies fought free of the wreckage and started through (Continued on Page 7, Col. 4)

Brewers Strive To Clean Up Bars near Training Camps

Beer Industry Hopes To Make Dry Laws for Forces Unnecessary

By AMY PORTER
NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (AP)—A sailor in uniform can't buy a drink in the vicinity of the New York Navy Yard after midnight, although barrooms remain open until 4 a. m. If a soldier tries to dance with his girl to the tune of a juke box in a beer parlor near Fort Monmouth, N. J., the chances are the bartender will stop him and say, "sorry, you can't dance here."

If a restaurant proprietor near Fort Knox, Ky., decides a man in uniform has had enough, nothing will persuade him to serve another drink.

Try To Eliminate Complaints
Barrooms near defense areas are getting so picky about law enforcement and compliance with special army-navy requests, the United Brewers Industrial Foundation said today, that they've striven to eliminate complaint-material.

The beer industry, particularly, hopes to carry on its "clean up or close up" campaign to the point where special dry laws for the armed forces will seem unnecessary.

So far, of the thirty-four states where there are army camps, twelve have set up self-regulating committees according to a seven-point plan formulated by the brewers' foundation. Thirteen other states have similar programs, usually developed by local brewers' associations, and in six more states establishment of such programs is under consideration.

First, Warning Is Given
The usual procedure is to form a committee, headed by a man prominent in state affairs, then to send paid investigators around for periodic check-ups of beer-selling establishments. Where bad conditions are found, the committee sends a "clean-up" warning. If the warning goes unheeded, the committee presents evidence to law-enforcement authorities, so that the license of the offending establishment may be revoked.

The industry reports that more than 352,000 investigations conducted by committees in fourteen states have resulted in twenty-three prohibitions of licenses, thirty-eight license suspensions, seventy-one padlocks, 125 prosecutions of bootleggers and 510 revocations of license.

Each war since the Spanish-American has brought increasingly stringent liquor regulations for the troops. In that war, according to the WCTU, "more men died of liquor than of fever."

FDR Opposes War Building Location

Does Not Want $35,000,000 Structure near Arlington Cemetery

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Asserting that he once had been guilty of permitting the desecration of Washington by favoring erection of World War buildings in a parkway, President Roosevelt told reporters today that he was inclined to oppose construction of a $35,000,000 war department building near the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery.

Both Houses of Congress have approved the structure, which is designed to house 40,000 government employees and has been described as "the largest office building in the world."

Mr. Roosevelt said he thought the necessary space could be obtained elsewhere without destroying the beauty of the Potomac river waterfront.

Explaining what he called a crime that should keep him out of the gates of heaven, Mr. Roosevelt said that in 1917, when he was assistant secretary of the navy, he had obtained approval of President Wilson for erection of army and navy structures in Potomac park along Constitution avenue. The buildings are still there.

He said that although he had not finally decided about the war department building he thought he might square himself with the Good Lord by turning it down.

Defense Co-ordinator Named by Maryland Roads Commission

BALTIMORE, Aug. 19 (AP)—William H. Cullimore III, Baltimore engineer, was named by the state roads commission today as "co-ordinator of defense work," a post in which he will represent the commission at Washington in requests for defense roads funds.

Roads commission officials said the pressure of business no longer made it possible for Commission Chairman, Ezra B. Whitman, to spend time in Washington conferring with army and navy officials.

Cullimore, forty-one, is secretary of the National Paving Brick Association at Washington and president of the Maryland Society of Engineers. He studied engineering at the Johns Hopkins university and served in the Municipal Engineering Department of Baltimore and Greensboro, N. C.

Tull's Body Is Finally Recovered

Funeral Services Will Be Held at Marion Station Residence

POCOMOKE CITY, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—Funeral services will be held Thursday at Marion Station for Miles Tawes Tull, 26, Maryland secretary of state who drowned Sunday in the Pocomoke river while on a fishing trip with friends.

Services will be at the Tull residence at 2:30 p. m. and burial will be in St. Paul's cemetery.

The body of the youthful official, appointed only a few months ago by Governor O'Connor, was recovered early this morning about two miles from where he fell from the fishing boat.

Two friends, Charles Elliott and Weldon Robertson, who had participated in the search since the tragedy, discovered the body floating near shore. At Shelton, where it was taken ashore, Dr. William Coulbourn, Somerset county medical officer, gave a verdict of accidental drowning.

Scores of private boats had augmented craft of the state conservation fleet in the search, and Governor O'Connor had taken an active part yesterday. When dragging efforts failed, the governor ordered dynamiting of the waters in the vicinity.

The governor returned to Annapolis this afternoon but will go to Marion Station for the funeral Thursday. Pallbearers, all school friends of Tull's, will be Edward Lee Miles, Kendall Wilson, William E. Lowe, Carl C. Green, Jr., Daniel H. Cullen and Roland Matthews.

Typographical Union Opposes Arbitration In Union Disputes

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 19 (AP)—The eighty-fifth annual convention of The International Typographical Union went on record today opposing arbitration in union disputes.

By a standing vote the convention rejected a resolution from the San Francisco union urging that, "when disputes arise between subordinate unions or subordinate unions and employers, which can not be adjusted after conference, the matter may be settled by arbitration." The veto was recommended by the law committee.

The delegates voted in favor of settling printers' wage scales by majority vote instead of a seventy-five per cent vote by secret ballot, as now required before a wage scale can be adopted.

Faster Route for Shipping War Goods To Russia Surveyed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—The Coast and Geodetic Survey disclosed today that it had surveyed a faster route for shipping war supplies to Russia than the normal route to Vladivostok. The new route is from Seattle to Komsomolsk, Siberia.

No distances or sailing times were given, but officials said the new route avoided the region of westerly gales encountered by ships in the normal Trans-Pacific routes.

The new route follows the great circle west from Seattle, going through Unimak Pass into the Bering Sea and north of the Aleutian Islands. This route, officials said, has been tried by Japanese freighters, but would be new to American vessels.

Officials hinted that the route would be safer from potential Japanese interference than the Vladivostok route.

Jones Is Accomplished Furniture Designer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt received evidence today that Jesse Jones, his secretary of commerce and federal loan administrator, is an accomplished furniture designer.

A new mahogany cabinet table arrived at the White House during Mr. Roosevelt's recent absence. A gift from Jones, it will replace an old rectangular table around which momentous cabinet conferences have been held.

The new table, made by an Illinois furniture company on plans and specifications prepared by Jones, has an octagonal shape, and is designed so that no cabinet member will have to crane his neck to see a colleague at the other end.

To be used for the first time on Thursday, the table has places for fifteen persons—the president, the vice president, ten cabinet members, the federal security and works administrators, and the civilian defense director.

Six More Articles Are Restricted

TWO TIME BOMBS FOUND ON DAMAGED LINER IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Police department said today that two time bombs were discovered on the stern deck of the Cuba mail line cargo vessel Panuco which was virtually destroyed Monday in a fire starting on the Brooklyn pier of the New York dry dock company with a known death list of five.

One of the bombs exploded soon after the discovery was made, but nobody was hurt.

Lt. Arthur Braconier, commander of a fireboat that has been standing by since the burning vessel was towed from the pier, discovered the bombs.

The pier exploded soon after the fire lieutenant found it, ripping a large hole through the stern of the ship and blasting a load of jute into the water.

Within a few moments, the firemen found a second bomb of the same type, he said, a missile about four inches long and four inches wide.

The second bomb was placed in a barrel of oil and the police bomb squad was called to handle it.

Discovery of the bombs came as a board of inquiry from Washington was investigating the cause of the fire that resulted in damage estimated at more than $1,500,000.

The fireboat had been standing by the mill smoldering vessel, pouring a stream of water onto it as it lay, listing to port, beached on the red hook flats of New York harbor.

Investigators first had expressed the opinion that the ship, a recent arrival from Mexico with chemicals and a general cargo was not the victim of sabotage.

OPM Adopts Plan To Spread Work

Defense Orders Will Be Given to Small Mills and Factories

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Army and navy purchasing policies were revised today when the OPM approved a program designed to spread defense orders among small mills and factories and prevent unemployment resulting from concentration of armament contracts.

The council of the office of production management, composed of William S. Knudsen, Sidney Hillman, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox adopted a plan approved previously by purchasing officials of the army and navy defense representatives.

Principal points include: Special treatment designed to spread defense work wherever practicable into communities or industries faced with unemployment because they cannot obtain materials for non-defense production.

A requirement that a statement as to percentage of work to be farmed out under sub-contracts shall be placed in every defense agreement of more than $50,000.

A requirement that a detailed statement on sub-contracting intentions shall be submitted with contract proposals of $250,000 or more.

Episcopalians Will Make Pilgrimage To Old Church

SALISBURY, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—The doors of old St. Bartholomew's church, 206-year-old religious shrine, will open Sunday for the annual Episcopal pilgrimage.

The church is opened only for services on St. Bartholomew's day. The church often is called Green Hill church after old Green Hill town, now vanished.

The Rt. Rev. William McClelland, D. C. bishop of the Diocese of Eastern, will be celebrant for Holy Communion, and the Rt. Rev. Francis H. Talit, D. D., S.T.D., L.L.D., Bishop of the Diocese of Pennsylvania will preach the sermon.

Some of the visitors will follow the custom of the founders of the parish, and come to the service by boat along the Wisconsin river. Picnic lunches usually follow the 11 a. m. services.

Supporters of the old church have saved it from erosion by the river, and from termites which ate into the ancient timbers. Work still is underway to restore the original woodwork. Some repairs are being made with bricks from an old house of similar age.

Like Maryland Beer

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes reported today that 4,585,345.77 gallons of beer had been sold in Maryland last month.

A total of 3,290,720.94 gallons of Maryland brewed beer were sold in the state, compared to 1,294,624.83 gallons of imported beverage, the state comptroller said.

Imports of beer exceeded exports, with Maryland shipping only 1,011,239.35 gallons out of state, or 282,365.48 less gallons than were imported, Tawes declared.

Trial of Eskimos Gets Under Way

Fifteen-Year-Old Girl Killed in an Outbreak of Violence

BELCHER ISLANDS, HUDSON BAY, Canada, Aug. 19 (AP)—Eskimo witnesses at the murder trial of Aleck Apawkok and the woman Akeenik testified today that when fifteen-year-old Sarah Apawkok was killed in an outbreak of violence on the lonely islands last winter other natives believed satan had been slain.

The girl was one of nine Bercher Eskimos killed during arguments that arose from the contention of some of the natives that Christ had come to earth again. Seven Eskimos are charged with murder and the trial of the dead girl's brother and Akeenik, one of the two women under arrest, began today.

It opened not long after the arrival of Mr. Justice C. P. Plaxton and the judicial party. The courtroom where the strange tale of shootings and beatings among the naturally peaceful Eskimos will be told is a large tent.

Peter Sala and Charlie Ouyerack, whose claims to divine power are believed to have touched off the arguments out of which the violence arose, testified today. They are among the seven accused.

Sala said he had believed he was God in thoughts but not in body. Ouyerack said another Eskimo had called him Jesus and he believed what the other Eskimo told him.

An Eskimo named Jahanasie, held as a witness, testified that Sarah thanked her brother when he struck her with a stick on the snowhouse where the claims to divine powers by Sala and Ouyerack were discussed.

The girl did not believe Sala was God and that was their reason for killing her, Jahanasie said.

The setting for the trial was almost as strange as the story being told. Mr. Justice Plaxton sat at a plain table covered with a Union Jack, with a picture of the royal family beside him, while the Eskimo witnesses and audience sat on moss.

CCC Enrollees Receive Ground Training in Aviation Subjects

EASTON, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—Enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps Camp at Goldsboro, near here, are now being given ground training in aviation which may lead to pilots' licenses. Camp Educational Adviser Robert L. Mitchell said today.

The courses which the CCC boys are studying are being held under government sponsorship in the civilian pilot training program, Mitchell said.

Classes are held three nights weekly in civil air regulations, aerial navigation, meteorology and general service of aircraft.

At the end of the classes, those students with the highest marks in classroom and examination are awarded flight scholarships for thirty-five hours' free flight training, culminating in a private pilot's license.

The courses for CCC enrollees are limited to Maryland boys, Mitchell said.

Potomac Edison To Give Service To Co-operative

Says Power Is Available to 88 per Cent of Former Members

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—The Potomac Edison Company has made electric service available to eighty-eight per cent of the former members of the Adams Electric Cooperative, Inc., which unsuccessfully sought to extend its lines into Frederick and Carroll counties, the power firm reported today.

D. E. Stultz, commercial vice president of Potomac Edison, reported to the public service commission on the status of the rural electrification program.

The PSC on May 2, after a seven-day hearing, denied the petition of the Gettysburg, Pa., Cooperative, sponsored by the Rural Electrification Administration, to serve Maryland farmers.

In his report to the commission, Stultz said "the necessary short line extension to make service available to all parts of this area have been developed and the construction is to a large degree completed."

Service now Available
"Of the 362 proposed members of the Cooperative, service is now available, with no further construction by the company necessary, to 320, or eighty-eight per cent of the total."

"Of the 320 who have service available to them, 263 have signed electric service agreements with Potomac Edison Company, and 182 are already receiving service. The remainder of those who have signed contracts with the company are being connected daily as their house wiring is completed."

Stultz said that of the forty-two members of the original project to whom lines have not been built, two were expected to sign shortly, fifteen were expected to sign later, twelve were undecided about waiting service, six cannot afford service and seven are not interested in service.

"In many instances," Stultz said, "a delay is being experienced due to the fact that the membership in the Cooperative was originally signed by the tenant on the farm and the owner thereof is unwilling to wire the premises."

Co-operation Expected
He added that many of the proposed cooperative members had been seen several times by Potomac Edison representatives, and that a canvass was being made of all those who had not signed.

In its opinion denying the Cooperative petition to enter the territory, the PSC said "that if those persons who have joined the Cooperative x x x will cooperate reasonably with the Potomac Edison Company, instead of interfering, they can get service on reasonable terms more promptly than it could be obtained from the petitioner."

The principal reason given by the PSC for denying the Cooperative's petition to enter Frederick and Carroll counties was that such an action would result in unnecessary duplication of power lines.

The weekly payroll at the Brooklyn navy yard is approximately 1,000,000, and until recently all workers were paid in cash. Now they get checks.

Child's Body Found Stuffed in Icebox

Coroner Announces Eight-Year-Old Boy Was Sexually Assaulted

READING, Pa., Aug. 19 (AP)—Dr. Paul B. Good, Berks county coroner, announced after an autopsy today that eight-year-old Billy Krewson had been sexually assaulted, stuffed into an ice box in a vacant store and left there to die. The child's overall-clad body was found by chance earlier in the day. He disappeared last Wednesday.

Dr. Good said Billy had lived for about two days after being brutally locked in the narrow cell. The cause of death was asphyxiation.

While authorities immediately instituted a search for a sex degenerate, they also continued questioning scores of children and neighbors who had heard rumors for several days that "Billy is locked in an ice box." Police theorized that Billy may have climbed into the box during a child's game.

Abrasions on the child's head and arms indicated he had struggled to extricate himself from the box.

Solomon Boscov, 51, owner of the store, and Harold Stubbs, 21, Denver, Pa., salesman, found the child's body during an inspection of the premises.

It was a tragic end to a tragic young life.

At the age of four, Billy fell on a sidewalk and fractured his skull. Last year, he was struck by an automobile and suffered a broken leg. These accidents, together with resultant poor health had kept the child from going to school with his playmates, but he had improved recently and was looking forward to entering the grades in the fall.

"After the strain," I feel better now," said Mrs. Amos Krewson, whose husband is a roofer.

"I used to dream my son was calling for help. I couldn't eat because I kept thinking Billy was hungry, somewhere. That's all over now."

Review Is Postponed

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—Division headquarters today announced the postponement of a review of the Twenty-ninth infantry division's Maryland regiments which had been scheduled for Thursday afternoon with Governor O'Connor and other state dignitaries guests of honor.

The review was postponed, headquarters announced, because funeral services will be held Thursday for Miles Tawes Tull, Maryland secretary of state, drowned Sunday.

There was no immediate announcement of another date for the review, but it was said that it would take place before the division leaves Fort Meade September 15 for maneuvers in Virginia and the Carolinas.

Identical Twins Marry Twins

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 19 (AP)—Identical twins Raleigh and Roman Kraft, 35, of Davenport, Iowa, took identical twin brides today.

Raleigh married Miss Ruby Martens, Roman Miss Ruth Martens. The nineteen-year-old sisters are from Walcott, Iowa.

Firemen Recover Two Bodies from Deck of Freighter

Five Are Dead and Seventy-two Injured in Waterfront Blaze

NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (AP)—Firemen recovered two charred bodies today from the deck of the fire-ravaged Cuba Mail Line freighter Panuco, but at nightfall, thirty hours after the swift destruction of the 3,570-ton ship, its cargo and pier, the death toll was still undetermined.

There were five known dead and seventy-two injured, of whom thirty-two remained in hospitals. Four—possibly five—members of the ship's crew of thirty-five, and about thirty-five longshoremen were missing.

As a special board of inquiry heard testimony that a spark from a lighter might have caused the Brooklyn waterfront blaze which did an estimated $1,500,000 damage, marine police grappled in the pier wreckage for bodies and firemen awaited an opportunity to explore the ship's holds where officials expressed fear some longshoremen were trapped.

John F. Manuel, pier superintendent of the steamship company, told the inquiry board of the United States Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation that "there is a strong possibility that a spark from a stove on a lighter did cause the fire." There were about 1,600 bales of inflammable sisal hemp on the pier, and Manuel said he saw the fire start there. Seven lighters were moored alongside the ship and pier.

"From my experience," Manuel said, "I do not believe any longshoreman would attempt to smoke while any supervisor or boss stevedores were in the vicinity. It would have been deliberately started by anyone on the lighter."

The board heard from two witnesses that the explosions which accompanied the fire apparently came from the pier. Manuel expressed belief they were caused as cans of paint caught fire, and Theodore King, chief boatswain's mate of the coast guard, said it sounded as if heated inflammable liquids were blowing out of their containers.

Company Quits Business
BALTIMORE, Aug. 19 (AP)—The Ashburton Steam Heat Company, Inc., of Baltimore, was allowed to discontinue operations in an order handed down today by the Public Service Commission.

The PSC granted the company's petition for abandonment of its franchises, which was the subject of a public hearing last Thursday. At the hearing, several of the firm's customers said they would have difficulty installing individual heating plants in time for the winter season.

Watch Your Language

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—From now on, dentists in the Twenty-ninth Infantry division will watch their language.

A selectee in the One-Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry reported to have his teeth fixed. When the dentist finished the job he said to the soldier, "now you can go home."

So the soldier did—and now he's in the doghouse for being A.W.O.L.

GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Lilium candidum or the Madonna Lily is one of the easiest of lilies to grow; likewise it is most readily propagated.

One method is quite simple and there is a thrill in doing it successfully. This is by stem propagation.

After the lily has finished blooming pull out the stem from the bulb taking care, of course, not to break it off. Next remove the leaves from the bottom section and plant this part in a somewhat protected and shady place in the garden, as shown in this Garden-Graph. Mulch the earth around the stalk and water during dry weather.

SET THE LILY STEM 10 TO 12 INCHES DEEP

Leave the stalk in the ground about two months, then dig it up carefully. By this time there should be many small bulbs or bulblets growing in the axils of the leaves. These bulblets, in turn, can be planted and coaxed into strong healthy plants.

Rock garden plants such as creeping phlox, sedums, and the other creeping types should be thinned after blooming to prevent their crowding out other less vigorous growing plants.

The general summer pruning of shrubbery should have stopped before now, but extra long growths on both vines and shrubs may be headed back at any kind.

Keep snipping off the faded blossoms of the annuals to prevent seed formation and assure a continual supply of flowers through the fall.

Blanch the cauliflower heads by pulling the leaves up over the top and fastening them together with a string.

Pot-grown strawberries can be set out now with assurance of their bearing fruit next season.

The manufacture of salad dressing is a forty-eight million industry in terms of value of annual production, according to factory reports to the Census bureau.

It's a Deal

BALTIMORE, (P)—Children who heard talks on ancient history at Walters Art Gallery demanded to be shown a mummy. The gallery had none. So it made a deal with the Metropolitan Museum in New York—one copy of Bushnell's Oriental Ceramics for one mummy.

It takes about 1,800 Olympia oysters—the native oyster of the Pacific coast—to make a gallon.

State Republicans Are Beginning To Sit Up

THAT is an appealing list, indeed, which comes out of the poll conducted by the Maryland Federation of Young Republicans to rustle possible candidates for the party gubernatorial nomination in the 1942 election. Of particular interest here is the fact that three Cumberlanders are included, namely, Judge D. Lindsey Sloan, Judge William A. Huster and Tasker G. Lowndes, all of whom constitute top-ranking material.

The number of names brought out in the poll shows that there is plenty of available gubernatorial material of the requisite ability in the party. The Young Republican federation has done a service in bringing the fact to public attention as it has.

It is well for Republicans of Maryland to look ahead thus early to the next gubernatorial election. It indicates an increasing interest in the party, for one thing, and for another it prompts hope that, despite the large Democratic majority in the state, Maryland Republicans really have a good chance to do something in the 1942 election.

There are several reasons for that. One is that widespread dissatisfaction and discontent prevails among members of all political parties over the blunders and shortcomings and extravagances of the New Deal administration, which will certainly not be lessened as their effects are borne upon the people between now and the election. Another is a realization that opposition to its course will be helped and a salutary influence provided by bringing about changes in subservient state administrations. Still another is the hot fight that is already brewing among candidates for the Democratic nomination for the governorship.

The News hopes the interest and discussion prompted by the poll of the Maryland Federation of Young Republicans will continue apace. The initiative thus taken is an encouraging sign. It indicates that Republicans of the state are beginning to sit up and take notice after a rather long spell of illness.

The Underlying Cause Of The Strikes

THE NATION is again witnessing strikes in both defense and non-defense industries. It is a deplorable development, particularly when it involves huge defense contracts as at the strike-bound Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company at Kearney, N. J., government operation of which seems to be the only immediate solution.

A compilation by the National Association of Manufacturers shows that in the five weeks after the invasion of Russia by Germany 554 man days were lost because of strikes in defense industries, as compared with 960 man days lost in the five weeks before the invasion. That was a reduction of forty-two per cent.

On the other hand, the compilation shows 2,467,000 man days lost in the five weeks after the invasion in non-defense plants as against 2,171,000 man days lost by strikes in the five weeks before the invasion, an increase of approximately fourteen per cent.

These figures should be placed against the record of 4,358,900 man days of defense work unfettersibly lost during the first seven months of the year, worth an estimated $29,480,000 in defense construction; and a total of 15,330,263 man days lost in non-defense industries.

If Communist influence is believed by many to have caused the change in defense plant strikes after the German invasion of Russia, what influence is now causing an increase in lost man days in defense industries — and in the non-defense industries?

The Communist influence has played a part, but the cause lies much deeper than that. Many of the walk-outs have not been brought about by demands for higher wages, shorter hours or better working conditions, but have stemmed from the attempts of labor unions to gain more power.

The real cause can be traced to the absence of a labor law which would grant to both workmen and management equal responsibilities as well as rights. The basic trouble cannot be reached by government seizure.

Hitler Has a Long Way Yet To Go in Russia

RUSSIA is now in its hour of travail. For more than eight weeks it has gallantly held off the German hordes in three important drives. Now there has come a change for the worse. The Nazis have broken through on the southern front and are reported to have surrounded Odessa on the Black sea, cutting off that important port from the rest of the Ukraine. Kiev, momentarily, is being encircled in a strategic drive toward the sea. These do not look good for the Soviet right now.

But the capture of cities—even important cities—will not mean the total destruction of the Russian army. The Red forces for years have been trained for an eventuality such as this. The army has been given training in the art of mobility, the people in the "scorched earth" policy.

The fall of a city is bad, but not fatal, for the Russians have seen to it that the military production of supplies and equipment has been widely scattered on both sides of the Ural mountains. It will take more than the fall of Kiev or Odessa or even Leningrad to devitalize the fighting strength of the Soviets.

The fighting to date bears out the toughness of the Reds. When the Germans first pierced the Russian line they thought that it was all up with the Russian cause. The presumption was a little previous for the Soviets, in magnificent style, retreated to new fortifications, where an equally fierce stand was made against the invader.

If the Reds have not been demoralized by the gradual retreat, Hitler still has a long way to go to smash the army of the Soviets. Meanwhile, German war bulletins, which have become totally unreliable in the war on Russia, should be recognized as lies by those who still read them.

And Now the Garbage Can Gets Tagged

NOT INFREQUENTLY an idea or a custom that has worked out successfully in one field is copied in another. For example, over at Frederick in this state and down at Petersburg, Va., city authorities are tagging garbage cans just as they do automobiles for traffic violations in order to curb violations of their refuse collection ordinances.

At Frederick most violations are the disregard of the rule to separate burnable from unburnable refuse, and the refuse containers of violators now are decorated with red tags informing householders that they must dispose of their own refuse unless it is separated properly.

The main trouble at Petersburg is violation of the ordinance regulating location of refuse containers. Offenders who are tagged must pay a fine of $1 at police headquarters within twenty-four hours, or receive a summons.

Here in Cumberland there has been no complaint of a lack of co-operation on the part of householders since the new waste collection regulations were put into effect some time ago. Does this mean that people of this community have more civic pride than those at Frederick or Petersburg? If so, it is a matter for congratulation, although this is not to admit that Cumberland has any startling super-abundance of it, but it can modestly lay claim to a large measure.

Coal an Important National Asset

JOHNSTOWN, PA., is stressing the importance of coal in our national economy in an observance this week known as Black Diamond week and the interesting information, not appreciated by many, is given by the Tribune, of that city, that coal has an annual value greater than all the other minerals of this country combined.

The coal of the country, the Tribune notes, has five and a half times the value of all our gold, twenty-two times the value of all the silver, seven times the value of all the copper and seven times the value of all the iron mined annually in the United States. Furthermore, the energy in a pound of coal is two and one-half to three times the energy in our most powerful explosive, TNT.

Coal will assume a much greater importance when its hundreds of by-products are exploited. In which field there are almost limitless opportunities, of which more advantage should be taken.

Clan Rivalry In Japan

THE READER of the daily dispatches from the Orient should bear in mind that there exists within the unit of Japanese armed forces a rivalry between the Japanese navy and the Japanese army. It is clan rivalry.

The navy belongs to the Satsuma clan. This clan resents the pretensions of the clan which dominates the army. In Tokyo the army usually shows the political edge on the navy. This breeds in navy men an eagerness to excel the army in initiative at the battle front.

This matter is of importance because in its eagerness to beat the army to the draw the Japanese navy may indulge in some piece of audacity such as a sea assault on Singapore.

Uncle Sam is not allowed to sell during the war the cotton and wheat which he has acquired on loans. And when the war ends Congress will think up some other excuse.

How completely Americans have ceased to live in the past is revealed by the disclosure that there is $10,000,000,000 of credit in this country, exclusive of the $50,000,000,000 the federal government owes.

Wishful Longings

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Chris is learning to play the accordion. Dot is learning to play the concertina. Why can't I play something too?

It makes me sick that I can't fill me with intolerable envy and yearning.

I know fellows who never had a lesson in their lives and can't read a note of music. . . . But they can sit down at the piano and nobody laughs. They make everybody happy. . . . Somebody says, "I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad." And that fellow thinks a bit and hums a bit and out comes the tune from the tips of his fingers. And everybody sings and has a wonderful time.

They say you can do anything you want to do, but I can't learn to play anything and never could. . . . I see youngsters about half as big as a minute sitting on a curbstone mouthing a harmonica so that your feet dance as you go by. . . . How do they do it, anyway? Is the music in their souls? Isn't there any music in mine? How did THEY get that way? I'm not so anxious to play the accordion or the concertina. I'll leave them to Chris and Dot. But I WOULD like to play the harmonica. . . . If I thought there was any chance for me I'd get a little one and start in. I'd carry it in my hip pocket and take it on long walks. (It would be a good reason, you say, for taking long walks?) And I'd sit under a tree and astonish the birds.

Or if I had to wait on a corner for someone I could pull it out of my pocket and mouth sad sentimental songs and a bunch of kids would gather round and listen, and when I was finished, they'd cry, "Hey, mister, play that again!" . . . (Or the officer on the beat would suggest that I put that thing in my pocket and beat it!)

I don't see why I've never been able to play the harmonica. . . . I used to be pretty good with a comb and a piece of tissue paper.

Two Branches Are Reported for OPM Reorganization

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 — The president's handyman, New York Supreme Court Justice Rosenman, has been rumormongering around through the OPM, working up a reorganization plan, and is about ready with something.

Authoritatively recommended to head a new policy-making branch of the defense regime is William L. Batt, president of the big ball bearing company, S K F Industries, who has been in charge of several production lines in OPM, but has been doing more than that job. Mr. Batt knows the problem thoroughly and enjoys the confidence of the other government officials.

The advance inner notices of the Rosenman plan suggest also that William Knudsen, the nominal OPM, would handle the production end, as at present, but under an entirely different setup.

Will Cut Deeper

These limited reports indicate the unwieldy and confusing existing organization is at last to be broken down into a policy branch and a production branch, but the reorganization will cut deeper than that. OPM officials who have tried to draw charts of the existing organization have wound up with something approximating the finger-pointing smears of children in kindergarten. One OPM authority has said a chart made by a woman research expert for a business magazine is better than any they have produced. In short, the duplication, intertwining, overlapping of authority has been just about as bad as could be.

In recent weeks, the situation has grown steadily worse, while all involved are awaiting the efficiency report of Mr. Roosevelt's chosen investigator.

Eccles Tries Short Cut

Chairman Marriner Eccles, of Federal Reserve, contrived a short cut for his current move to get in and break up installment buying and "easy-purchase plans." (The economic godfather of the New Deal, British Economist John Maynard Keynes, told everyone here inflation could not even be restrained unless the purchase of goods was slowed down in this way.)

Mr. Eccles, and no doubt the White House also, figured there would be trouble from Congress if congressional approval were sought. The subject was left out of the price bill. Instead, Eccles dug out an obsolete amendment in the Banking act of 1933, giving his board power to control credit. It was written for the depression, and forgotten since.

Some of the congressmen are murmuring against this "subterfuge" House Banking Chairman Steagall is protesting the amendment was not intended for the purpose to which the board is going to put it. But nothing will be done. Unquestionably the administration could get congressional authority if it wanted to take the time.

A more important question is whether congressional stalling on the price bill, and the administration's long delay in moving against installment buying, will not make the remedial measures too late.

African Expedition Not Favored

Mr. Roosevelt's return from his hideaway sea conference stimulated a new flurry of rumors that he might throw an expeditionary force into Dakar or Casablanca — but you will have to go a long way inside this government to find anyone who thinks the idea is good.

The local French governor at Dakar has repeatedly informed our consul there that any "occupation move" will be resisted to the utmost, whether it come from the Free French, British or Americans. The Free French General De Gaul once assumed there would be little resistance, and thereby made one of the major mistakes of the war. He is clearly the one to try it again. — If anyone does.

But if there is to be resistance.

PROPOSES SALES TAX

Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg

A five per cent manufacturers' sales tax, which he declared would raise $1,250,000,000, was proposed by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, who said there was substantial support for the plan in the Senate Finance committee. Food, clothing and medicine would be exempted from tax.

THE COMPROMISE STAGE

Unsuitable Men Are Being Considered For the OPM Shake-up, Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—As this column has predicted, now that the president has returned there is going to be a real attempt to reorganize the whole United States.

No Germans There

No Germans are in Dakar. A few Nazi members of the Amistice commission and several Nazi business men, trying to drum up Arab trade, are in Casablanca, next good port on the Northwest African coast. So far Gen. Weyand has stood firmly against allowing Nazi military forces in these spots. French Morocco and Tunisia, Petain has made no move to implement his promise of empire "bases" to the Nazis. Dakar is isolated, would be even more difficult for the Nazis to occupy, against resistance, because they have no fleet.

Much official sentiment seems to favor leaving Dakar alone.

War Plans Ancillary

Inclusion of an army and a navy officer from the "war plans" division at the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting is not to be taken literally, frank statements ever made by so able a politician he said, even before this stretch arose and even on the eve of a political campaign something to the effect that the weak joint in the new deal harness was bad administration. Ain't it the truth.

Misfit Saviors

And now we're going to fix it all up. And who do you suppose are now revealed as the architects of this new structure for the mobilization and administration of the great American industrial complex? None other than a couple of guys of the lighter and brighter days of presidential pleanstariat toward the White House jammiesariat, King Arthur did, Henry the Morgue (Morgenstern), Tommy the Cork (Corcoran), Harry the Hop (Hopkins), Leon the Hen (Henderson), Benny the Cone (Cohen), and Sammy the Rose (Rosenman), etc. The last two have been recalled to the siege of world events and is now not only extremely busy but overcrowded as well. At spasmodic intervals of four years, when a president was to be inaugurated, Washington was accustomed to the fact that thousands of visitors poured in from all over the country, filled hotels and rooming houses and then departed, leaving things much as they had been before. Beginning with 1933, however, when the swarming of New Dealers began, new arrivals have been increasing day by day. Washington, now eleventh city in population, is, according to Wendell Willkie, the other boom town in the United States.

District of Columbia authorities warn that housing, school, health and play facilities are becoming insufficient. Meanwhile, government bureaus have increased so rapidly that they have spread over into Maryland and Virginia. New apartment houses nearing completion have been taken over for more offices, with the result that the problem of living space grows more troublesome. Rents naturally are rising, and the president has asked Congress to set a limit. Old Washingtonians complain that the bustle is robbing their city of its charm. But the tumult will not go on forever. When it is over their familiar place will be more beautiful than ever, with its magnificent new buildings and provision will have been made to take care in orderly fashion of what undoubtedly is to be permanent growth.

A Personal Friend

This is not said to disparage either of them. I scarcely know Mr. Cohen except by his handiwork. I know Sam Rosenman very well. I count him as a personal friend. He has known few men I liked better. Modest to a fault, he is the literary genius who has put the finishing and defining touches to most of the President's better speeches and to some of the very best of his state papers. He is an honest and an unusually able lawyer and a loyal, faithful friend—one of the sweetest characters in public life. But what the hell does he know about industry, organization and especially the bedlam of present day Washington confusion?

Adroit as Richelieu

The same question could be asked about Ben Cohen. Judging solely by his work, he is one of the cleverest legal draftsmen that ever effectively concealed a joker in a statute that should have been as obvious as a bull in a china shop.

He has a mind as adroit and astute as that of Cardinal Richelieu and he, too, has a passion for anonymity but for a reason quite different from that of Sammy the Rose, who shrinks through genuine modesty. Benny knows that, from his past triumphs, people are on warning and on guard about anything that bears the hall-mark of his genius.

These two, in closer collaboration with Sidney Hillman, another able Richelieu, than with anybody else, are baking this new pie. It may be perfect but just as a gamble. I'll bet it contains four and twenty black-birds and that when the pie is opened they will sing, in this dainty dish before the king, as stridently as the present flock. Why can't we shake this business out into the open and get really going?

Wishful Thinking

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, in his statement accompanying President Roosevelt's decree clamping down on installment credit, declared that the restrictions would not only tend to conserve vital material for war production, but would exert a whole-some economic influence. He explained:

"Restriction of consumer credit during the emergency will assist in the orderly transition from the defense to the post-defense period. By diminishing the volume of credit used for consumer durable goods, it will make funds available for investment in defense bonds and other forms of savings."

"When the emergency is over, funds so saved can be drawn upon to replenish the depleted stocks of durable goods. At that time capacity for their production will be more increasingly available as the production of defense materials is reduced."

If Mr. Eccles expects either to create a market for government securities or a reservoir of private funds for post-war use through the curtailment of installment credit, he will be as disappointed in the results, we predict, as Mr. Ickes was with the fruits of his gasoline curfew. The people who will be affected by the installment credit ban are not, for the most part, people who will save their money.

They are essentially spenders. If they don't spend for automobiles they will spend for clothes or entertainment or liquor or more food. The regulations have not yet made their appearance. When they do, however, merchants and individuals will begin at once figuring ways and means of evading them. And the net result, we are willing to wager, will be heretofore to disrupt methods of doing business, to impose an added degree of inconvenience upon the public, without accomplishing much of importance in any direction aimed at.

Defense Work Is Taking Many Men From the Farms

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

Farm labor shortages, increasing alarmingly all over the country, aren't the result of the expansion of military manpower, but may be traced directly to the demands of defense industries for men.

This is according to Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, newly appointed director of Selective Service.

General Hershey was a farmer long before he was a soldier. Born near Angola, Ind., he was farmer's son and the descendant of generations of soil tillers. Although he left his parental career for other fields, he's an agriculturist at heart.

Many Enlist

Naturally, he admits, the army has taken some young men from the land. A substantial number of rural lads have enlisted in armed forces, without being conscripted, and Selective Service has caught quite a few. Nevertheless, says the general, the percentage of young farmers in our military establishment is small in comparison with the number who have come home to work in defense industries.

As for Selective Service, General Hershey emphasizes that his nation-wide organization has been cautioned repeatedly against inducting needed farm boys.

Furthermore, representatives of the agricultural department work constantly with Selective Service officials, advising them of farm problems. On the basis of a recent report by Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard, all local boards have been warned that they must not interfere with production of our food supply.

Nevertheless, there's a growing shortage of farm labor because of our defense industries' rapid expansion.

Is a Mechanic

The general tells why. The farm laborer is so darned valuable in a factory! He's skilled in the use of machinery.

"Times," observes General Hershey, "don't now as they used to be, when a farm kid did nothing but push a plow. Today, besides preparing the soil, planting seed and harvesting crops, he must be a mechanic. He must be able to handle and to repair, with meager facilities, the implements he uses. He must be skilled in the use of tractors and reapers and binders and all such devices—and to keep 'em in order. And he's got to be able to do it single-handed. He's an adjunct in a city factory."

"There are a lot of other things he must be pointed on—handling and feeding of horses, soil and weather conditions, lots of things. 'It takes time to teach him and, if after he's educated, some urban industry cops him off, he's as much of a loss to farming as he would be if he's grabbed for military service."

"And urban industry has its attractions for him. Its wages are higher. Its hours are shorter. Soldiering may not have many inducements for him, but he can see the advantage of a good city job."

Food Supplies Vital

"But an adequate food supply," observed the general, "is as essential a war material as fighting men are. So soldiering doesn't want to overly compete with industry and the farms for those agriculturally trained boys. We've got to have industrial workers for the production of guns and munitions, but we usually have got to have farm kids to feed our soldiers and our munitions makers too."

"What worries us of the Selective Service is not that farm boys are scarce, but that urban industry catches 'em first. It's more important for 'em than we are, and we're almost driven to scaring the boys off—to stay on their farms."

As a farmer, General Hershey's picture is attached up in the upper left-hand corner. He had a quid of tobacco in the corner of his mouth. See it protrude.

The Selective Service's publicity bureau emphasizes it to prove how distinctly a farmer he is.

Factographs

Morning Motto

Whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essentially service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together.—SWIFT.

Prisoners, Guards Are Affected by Emotional Panic

Dr. J. W. Cronin, Leavenworth Official, Describes Prison Phenomenon

By RENNIE TAYLOR

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19 (AP)—Emotional panic, a recurring prison phenomenon, which overcomes prisoners as well as prisoners, was described before the American Prison Association today by Dr. J. W. Cronin, chief medical officer of Leavenworth federal penitentiary.

This particular behavior has nothing to do with mass uprising, strikes and other headline-making outbreaks at prisons. Usually it affects only one prisoner at a time, and occasionally one prisoner and one guard.

Subject to Emotional Panic

Every imprisoned man is subject to three or four periods during which emotional panic may occur, Dr. Cronin said.

The first danger period is at the beginning of imprisonment, when the individual must reconcile himself to separation from loved ones and be thrown into association with companions not of his own choice.

If he fails to adapt himself he may "blow up." This may take the form of rebellion, impulsive or aggressive action or an attempt to escape.

His second exposure comes when the letters from parents, wives or sweethearts begin to slow up. His hold on the outside world is slipping.

The third danger period develops when he is asked by some other prisoner to take part in homosexual practices.

Inmate Must Solve Problem

"Homosexuality is common in every prison," said Dr. Cronin, "and the inmate must solve the problem himself. The code of the prison would demand absolute silence on the part of inmates on the subject."

Another potential emotional panic is in the making as the time approaches for his first appearance before the parole board.

His final panic period comes when the time approaches for his release. He faces the prospect of another complete upset in his mode of living—a return to the world but not quite as a free man.

Legislative Council Will Meet Today

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 19 (AP)—Maryland's Legislative Council meets at 11 a. m. tomorrow with House Speaker Thomas Conlon assuming the duties of chairman and Senator John B. Funk (D-Fredrick) sitting as a new member.

Conlon, vice-chairman, will preside in the absence of a chairman under a ruling by the attorney general's office. Senator Arthur Brice (D-Kent), council chairman, resigned recently.

The attorney general held that the council did not have the power under existing law to elect a new chairman and added that the vice-chairman should preside until the next general assembly meeting.

Senator Funk was elected by the council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Brice, appointed several weeks ago by Governor O'Connor to the public service commission. Brice, however, has not resigned from the legislature.

Dr. Horace Plack, director of the Bureau of legislative reference who acts as council secretary, said tomorrow's meeting would be a routine conference, adding that no specific topics had been scheduled for discussion.

one of principle in keeping promises."

To all this, however, it was left unexplained why any promise to restrict the Coolidge departures to twenty-two persons was ever required—if it was actually given—from the embassy in the first place. Japanese home office restrictions on foreigners were mentioned and it was stated that these were similar to American restrictions.

Relations Discussed

Unlike the United States Ambassador Joseph Grew, British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie thus far is not complaining. He is at a mountain resort.

In Washington Secretary of State Hull disclosed that Grew's conversations with the Japanese foreign minister went beyond the question of American exit from Japan. It was assumed that the whole problem of American-Japanese relations was up for discussion.

Soviet Command

Violent Action Reported

Reports late last night had pictured both the northern and southern wings of the Russian line as holding.

The early morning communiqué said the Red Air Force heavily bombed the Ploesti oil field in Rumania and set off explosions and raging fires.

Action was so violent and so vast a scale that no more than a general picture could be drawn from the mid-day communiqué of the Red command, which reported only that the great struggle was unabated everywhere.

It appeared that the present Russian line ran from the Gulf of Finland west of Leningrad southward to the East of Smolensk and West of the Dnieper river to the Black sea.

Behind the German side of this line Russian forces were reported holding out in several large pockets, including Northern Estonia Alinn. Red Star, the army news organ, said use of big guns had become more important than ever now that the campaign had been converted from a blitzkrieg into a prolonged war.

Moreover, official accounts stressed that not even yet the Russians confined to wholly defensive actions. Red Star said Marshal Semenov Budyenny's forces in the southwest recaptured the town of K' by a counter thrust.

Counterattacks looked during periods when the invaders sought rest were declared to be severely punishing the Germans.

The battle for Leningrad, the Soviet Union's second city and greatest naval base, involved a German-Finnish column striking down from the North and a Nazi column beating Eastward from the Estonian theater.

There was no official news of the apparently relatively inactive Russian center before Moscow. There it was said unofficially that the armies of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko had been for days alternately containing the German drive and counter-attacking.

In the Ukraine, the heaviest fighting was in the big bend of the Dnieper river, where the Nazis had driven a wide salient beyond the iron ore city of Krivoi Rog on the North and to the Black sea port of Nikolaev on the South.

IN LONDON, authoritative sources said that German occupation of the Southern Ukraine West of the Dnieper river was not a fatal blow to the defenders.

They added that the great question was whether Marshal Semeon Budyenny could preserve his forces to hold the East side of the Dnieper. A Nazi crossing in force, it was said, would leave no other natural line of defense save the river Don, some 250 miles East of the industrial center of Dnepropetrovsk, reported to be in danger.

Germans Begin

command said, would complete German conquest of the Western Ukraine, an area about the size of Kansas. There was no mention, however, of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, on the West bank of the Dnieper 200 miles North of Odessa. Kiev was still in Russian hands but German troops have been reported at several points in its immediate vicinity.

Germans appeared confident they would be able to keep the Russians from holding the Eastern bank of the Dnieper. Although there have been heavy rains in the river's upper reaches, military observers discounted high water as an obstacle.

Among the natural advantages favoring the invaders, German military men said, was the fact that the Western bank of the river, where the Germans are situated, is high and steep. The Eastern bank, which the Russians must hold if the river is to bar German advance, is so low that Germans would be able to cover a crossing with protective artillery fire.

At Kiev the stream is 330 yards wide and at Cherson, on the Black sea, it is 675 yards.

Roosevelt Says

it contained a rather interesting parallel with the present situation. Then, driving home his point with a sharp, incisive manner of speaking, the president said that a year after the Civil war started the people of the North had not awakened to the fact that they had a war to win. In response to a question he said he had the service extension vote in mind as well as other things in making his statement.

A reporter inquired:

"Mr. President if you were writing the lead for this story what would you say?"

"President quotes Lincoln and draws parallel," was Mr. Roosevelt's reply.

"May we quote that?"

Mr. Roosevelt nodded his acquiescence.

Refreshed by Voyage

Refreshed by the voyage which included the historic Churchill meeting, Mr. Roosevelt was in obviously high spirits. His answers to questions were made quickly and directly. And there was something in the tone of his voice—by comparison with the press conferences which preceded his trip—which made it clear Mr. Roosevelt had much of the snap and verve which he lacked then.

He had had a conference during the day with Lord Beaverbrook, the British minister of supply, and the discussion turned quickly to that. With Beaverbrook, Mr. Roosevelt said, he had talked over the general problems of need and supply as they related to aid to Great Britain.

Then he went on to say that even before he started on his Churchill conference voyage he had asked the army and navy to undertake a survey, similar to one conducted a year ago. The purpose of the study is to get the figures on prospective supply and prospective need through 1942 and 1943.

"Does that mean this war is going to continue through 1943?" a reporter asked, recalling that previous British figures covered the year 1942.

If necessary, Mr. Roosevelt answered.

There followed a discussion of the arrangements that preceded the Atlantic rendezvous with Churchill. The secret was well kept, he continued, and yet the press had good reason to notice the absence of certain key figures both here and in London. No objection could be raised to the stories that were written about the absences, he said, because the stories were frankly presented as guesses. This, he added, was not true of what was said by one or two radio commentators whom he had heard.

cago's medical centers and it offered such a rare chance to make a thorough study of transmission of the disease that the national infantile paralysis foundation donated $4,000 and rushed fifty monkeys here for experiments.

Investigators expect to be using 200 or 300 monkeys—and more money—before the job is done in about three months.

The epidemic began June 4 in La Grange. A little girl came down with infantile paralysis. Six days later another child in the same school became ill. Cases three and four were two children attending a school across the street from the first school—but using the same playground.

From then on, the epidemic can be traced by direct or indirect contact to the first four cases.

The study is being made by the state health department, headed by Dr. Roland R. Cross, and the Cook county health unit.

Poliomyelitis is caused by a virus, a poison-like agent too small to be seen in an ordinary microscope. The virus has been found in the nose, throat and bowels but it is not known definitely whether the disease is spread by direct contact with the victims or carriers, by raw sewage in polluted streams, by contaminated water or milk and other foods, or by insect bites.

Why some cases never reach the paralytic stage is uncertain. Doctors aren't sure whether it's because of a different strain of virus, with different strength, or a difference in the resistance of the person affected.

the jungle toward the lights of Sao Paulo," Dunn said.

Jessup walked five miles down the wild mountain slope, found a house and led several persons back to the crash. While they were attempting to drag the bodies from the plane Jessup, who was severely bruised and dazed, started through the jungle again and finally found the road to Sao Paulo.

Dunn explained that Jessup was under the impression the plane had lost its way near Sao Paulo because of the low ceiling of clouds and flew about for an hour seeking the airport.

Novak said it was almost dusk when the plane fell yesterday, indicating the crash came long after the craft quit communicating with Sao Paulo airport at 1 p. m. He said that he, Jessup and Davies got out of the wreckage and after trying to save the others wandered most of the night through the forest.

Davies was taken to a hospital with an injured nose and Novak was treated for shock. Jessup was said to have returned to the scene of the crash.

tails are now being worked out for similar release procedure for national guard officers.

More Men Needed

SOUTH BEND Ind., Aug. 19 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Federal Selective Service director, said today the War department's plan to draft men got home after an average of eighteen months' service meant that more men would have to be drafted.

Hershey, here to speak at the American Legion State Convention, told newspapermen that draft calls would be increased to about 70,000 a month, near the maximum allowed by law.

The War department estimate that 200,000 will be due for release this year, he said, is about 80,000 above the estimate of National Selective Service headquarters.

Planes—"The state of production of combat planes is one of the most discouraging chapters in our national defense program.

"In June, this year, the production of military planes declined below the production established in May. In the month of July a still more serious reduction occurred, when the total production of military planes fell 200 below the schedule.

"In long range bombers so desperately needed, production now does not exceed sixty per month. Only thirty-five dive bombers were produced in May.

"For the year ending Sept. 1, 1941, the total production of combat planes for ourselves and for England will be less than 500 per month, as compared to production in Germany, estimated by competent authorities to be from two to three thousand per month."

Other equipment—"The first 105 MM Howitzer was produced on May 1, last, and only about 100 will be produced this calendar year. Thirty-seven MM Anti-tank Guns will be produced only at the rate of fifteen a month. Only fifteen of the eighty MM Mortars will be produced in the immediate months ahead. Not a single 155 MM gun will be produced in 1941."

Other Developments

Other defense developments during the day included:

A subcommittee of the House Military committee reported that after an investigation it had concluded that the cost-plus-fixed-fee contract for army construction tended to promote extravagance.

However, it said the army construction division had done a "magnificent and unparalleled" housing job.

The Senate Banking committee approved a bill giving the Federal Housing Authority power to insure an additional $200,000,000 worth of mortgages on defense housing. Previously it had been authorized to insure $100,000,000.

President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing a $275,000,000 flood control program. At the same time, he said he would ask Congress for funds only for those projects, included in the bill, which are important to national defense.

destroy the last hope of liberty.

Self Restraint Needed

"To deserve liberty we must adjust our concept of freedom to the realities of 1941. This means that the people of America will have to subject themselves to voluntary self-restraint in the exercise of their cherished rights. It means that we must accept a new sense of individual and group responsibility and accept those responsibilities quickly and willingly."

"It means that we must end the disgraceful time lag between our knowledge of crisis and our willingness to do something about it."

He said that whether Hitler won or lost, America would have to realize "that the United States is an integral and responsible part of the entire world, and that we can never again shirk our duty as inhabitants of this planet."

ill by his familiar tight naval cap and brass-buttoned jacket.

"Three cheers for Mr. Churchill," cried a dignified old gentleman in a wing collar, leading off an enthusiastic "Hip, hip hoorah!"

Bounds Up Platform

Waving, nodding and laughing as best he could with teeth clenched on that big cigar, the prime minister seized his wife's arm and bounded up the platform at the head of a milling procession.

Incidentally, his tobaccoist disclosed today Churchill had declined to buy a lot of 600 of his favorite brand of cigar because he refused to hoard, even though the supply is running low. Instead, he bought the usual twenty-five. They cost about sixty cents each.

Shortly afterwards it was disclosed that Capt. Elliott Roosevelt, who attended the conference as a military aide to his father, had arrived in London and called at the United States Embassy. It was not disclosed whether he came on the Prince of Wales or flew here.

It previously had been reported that another son of the president, Ensign Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., had visited Iceland with Churchill aboard the Prince of Wales, but Franklin's present whereabouts remained undisclosed.

maneuvers, such newspaper men to be held for twenty-four hours so they can not carry any vital information back to the other army.

Being captured by a friendly "enemy" has its advantages over the real thing but an automatic muzzle in the ribs provides enough realism, and the lieutenant's prodigious weapon wouldn't let me forget this wasn't real.

Must Step Lively

"Now you march and step lively," he ordered, and I did at six paces ahead as directed.

After a dusty march behind the lines the lieutenant turned me over to another officer in charge of other prisoners.

Midway with a serious grilling, he broadly grinned and said, "listen, fella, just suppose your pockets have been turned inside out." I later discovered correspondents can be questioned but are not supposed to be searched.

This wasn't much of a concession, however, as I wound up competing with about 200 military prisoners for small shade provided from a hot sun under some oak trees. Some of these slept, some just loafed, discussing life in a "concentration camp," but most of them talked about their chances for some food and a bath.

Guards with rifles kept us together, but one daring corporal dodged behind bushes while the guard paced along, and escaped. I decided I'd stick around.

Want Food and Water

The prisoners kept grumbling about food and water, and finally the guards let them pool their change to dispatch a motorcycle courier to a roadside stand for soft drinks and sandwiches. The prisoners kept asking for food, however, and a lieutenant told the mess sergeants to man our captured field kitchens and prepare a meal.

With the prospect of short rations all around, I propositioned the officer.

"Listen, lieutenant," I said, "suppose we call the whole thing off and I'll gladly remove one extra mouth to feed."

"Who said we are going to feed you?" he demanded hotly, then relented and grinned. "Aw get the hell out."

Support of Russia

Russia in its present war did not entail support of Communism; that we stand against Communism, but—

"We should not permit this to blind us to our own interest and to the major fact that the great and immediate threat to our position and standing as a great nation x x is Nazi Germany with its inordinate ambitions, its hated philosophy and its superb military organization."

The jurist dismissed as hypocritical Germany's claim that in attacking Russian she was fighting the battle of "Western Christian civilization against the Godliness of Soviet Russia."

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

YLENA'S FIRST thought on awakening the day after Christmas was, "Perhaps I dreamed it."

But she hadn't. Tate came for her that evening while it still was light and they, along with the enthusiastic senior Cromwells, and the O'Neils, drove out to inspect the property.

"Isn't it awfully far out?" Ylena ventured to Tate.

"That's the point. Dad bought all this land for almost nothing. We'll simply have acres for our private yards, walked in. Then we'll subdivide the rest. It will sell on the strength of the exclusive Junior Cromwells having built and the firm will make a lot of money."

He gave her an affectionate kiss. "You probably will, too. They'll want you to decorate."

The house was to be lavish, but the architect, a conventional sort, had stuck to the old-fashioned idea, the living room, the dining room, the den, the library, nothing in the way of clever and unexpected nooks. But when Ylena mentioned this to Tate he ridiculed.

"Now, darling, it's wonderful that you can make a dining nook out of an old broom closet, but in this case we have the money to have the house done right."

And absolutely, without a thrill, Ylena thought to herself, but found no further fault. She was too intent on her own business. There still was a great deal to be done to Terry Alkire's house, also she was making in some attention to Tish Reynolds.

Twice while Tate was on the California coast attending real estate conventions she zipped up to the Copper Creek ranch area, got into riding clothes and spent hours with Tish and Scott. While actually they did more visiting than planning, they did manage to make a few decisions and Ylena returned to La Madera to begin serious work on the low, rambling structure that was to put Tish permanently beside Scott Hamilton.

"Tish! Tish!" Barker chuckled mockingly. "You're deceiving your husband even before you're married." Secretly she was delighted that they were working on the ranch house.

With a very laugh, Ylena replied, "I learned deceit from Tate."

Too busy with his own affairs, Tate never once realized that his fiancée was sliding in extra work, though he occasionally did grow impatient.

"I believe that old man Alkire is making you do things over and over just to hold up our wedding."

"Don't be ridiculous!" she cried. All the same, she knew Terry's disapproval was great enough that she would like to postpone the marriage indefinitely.

However, in the late spring, she and Barker completed the cranky old man's residence, and he invited them to a dinner of celebration. "A special affair, so look pretty," he directed Ylena.

She wore a new formal of white marquisette, trimmed with bands of spiderweb, black chintilly lace. She and Barker, less acidulous and severe looking than usual in her chic white linen dinner suit, were the only women guests in a party of six men.

Barker, also formed the centerpiece for the large dining table. As one elaborate course followed another Ylena realized, just as he had specified, Terry Alkire's was a special affair.

She said so to Barker, as they drove home through the hot night. "It was sweet of Terry to give that lovely dinner for his old cronies, wasn't it?"

"Cronies!" Barker snorted. "Unless I miss my guess those cronies are the other investors in the Ensenada hotel and you were being shown off as dotting parents show off a smart child."

Ylena gasped. "It makes me perfectly weak. Oh, I hope I made a good impression."

"If you didn't it wasn't Mr. Alkire's fault. He certainly dealt you the right cues. I practically exploded when he bearded your school-dormitory property, asking if you weren't up a stump since school was out. And you, looking like an angel, gave the sweet explanation."

"Why, no! I've put in a public swimming pool and during vacation will use the housing units as dressing rooms and showers."

"What was so strange about it?" Ylena asked.

"Simply this. I happen to know that Mr. Alkire already knew about that clever project—he's even seen the swimming pool. Yet he played questions and answers with you and let you simply astound the other men with your brilliance. Their eyes wouldn't have popped out further if you'd turned a tripple somersault through that lovely big living room—and, of course, you noticed how he pointed out all the best features in the house?"

Thrilled over Barker's observations, Ylena scarcely could wait to see Terrence Alkire again. But when she did he merely said, "I can't stand this damn heat, my dear. I'm going to Catalina until September."

Tish left, also, about the same time as Alkire. "Come to the islands with me, Ylena. We'll be on Wabiki beach and not worry about a thing." When Ylena refused, the pudgy brunette said, "Then take it easy, darling. Let my place go until fall. I won't have you driving up there through this blasted hot desert wind."

Scott Hamilton also. When he came to say goodbye Ylena asked with a quizzical lift of one eyebrow, "Are you going to Honolulu?"

"Now, Ylena," he chided, "I should think you'd know I'm glad to be relieved of Tish's presence for a few months. I'm taking Aunt Daisy to Catalina."

Even Barker left. "There's no need for me to stick around just to make draperies and slip covers for Pop Cromwell's twin dream houses. Frankie can do that. Why shouldn't I take a trip and do some research study, get some ideas that will help us with our winter business?"

Ylena agreed that it was an excellent idea and bade farewell to still another friend.

As the scorching summer days passed, the girl realized she was not missing them at all, that her air-cooled shop was a refuge from torturous heat, and that the nights, though blackly hot and tropical, were the most romantic and serene moments she had spent with Tate.

They danced at pavilions or stretched out in low comfortable chairs in outdoor beer gardens to drink cold beer in frosted mugs and listen to the musicians who strolled from table to table. One night, while driving in the country, they heard guitars and singing and approached softly, to park and listen to the Mexican workers who were celebrating a wedding with their own fiesta. Princesita, La Golondrina, Estrellita, Preguntale a las Estrellas—they were singing all the songs so dear to the people below the Rio Grande, in the haunting, Latin voices that caress, yet occasionally wall strictly in what approaches anguish. Very softly Tate chimed in with the lovely Spanish words. Without knowing what they were, Ylena found them clutching her heart.

"What does it mean, Tate?" "Oh, ask of the stars, beloved—something like, ask them if I did not dream of you until the dawn was light and so forth and so forth and so forth."

He turned and looked at her in the faint light from the lanterns beside the Mexican shacks, then snatched her into his arms. "Oh, darling, darling, let's not wait until the house is finished to get married."

"I don't want to, either, but," Ylena protested, "it means so much to your parents; they want us to be married right in a completed house."

"Love, Tate," Tate supplied with a laugh. "Yes, Pop especially. He is such a romanticist I suppose I'll have to wait."

The houses were completed by mid-August, but they did not get married then and move into theirs immediately as planned, because Tate was ill.

Not just mildly ill, but seriously so. A complete breakdown, his mother lamented and told Ylena. "He has worked so hard."

Perhaps, Ylena thought to herself, but hard work was not a part of Tate's regime. Though she did not want to think still further, and remember Theodore Vincent's breakdowns, she could not help herself. But it's ridiculous, she insisted angrily. No one could come to the young immaculate Taylor Cromwell to older dissipated, dissipated Theodore Vincent, and yet there had been incidents—the night he had flown into a fury and ripped a letter to pieces because it refused to go into a slot. The dinner at the La Madera club when, because the waiter tipped over a glass of water, Tate had commenced to pour out all the water in the pitcher. So she worried, constantly, beneath her outwardly calm demeanor.

Meanwhile, as the weeks passed, she and Diane worked every day in a sisterly companionship on identical articles for their houses. Frankie helped or cared for Davy, who returned the adoration the dark, swarthy-skinned girl lavished on him.

After a month's rest Tate came home, clear-eyed and good-natured, in excellent condition once more. Looking at him Ylena forgot her fears.

It was on that night, while she sat visiting him, that the senior Cromwell answered the telephone, then came staggering out to say in a wildly, heart-broken voice, "Your houses are on fire!"

SEARCH FOR A BID
THERE ARE times when your hand is too strong to pass, and yet you cannot find a good sound bid to make with it. You lack adequate support for your partner's suit or suits. No Trump does not seem safe because some suit is not well stopped, and you either have no new suit which you can bid yourself or your first-bid suit does not justify a rebid. But if the hand has surplus strength, a pass would be the worst among several evils. Search for some kind of a bid, no matter how bad, rather than pass and perhaps thus lose a game.

Would you believe it? Some people actually passed that hand out, in a duplicate, because the South hand did not contain what they called three honor tricks with a four-card suit. They failed to figure that two four-carders will on the average be about as useful as one five-carder, also that those two jacks, that 10 and that 9 are very useful plus values. above really did some fine work, especially North when he bid that punk heart suit because his hand was too good to pass, and he preferred to avoid the worst possible alternative. It paid dividends. West decided to open the club suit, to avoid leading from his own honors. East won with the A and led the Q to the K.

South now did some neat playing. He led the diamond A, which West ducked, and the Q won. Back came the diamond 8 to the J and K. Unable to lead another club, West offered his heart 5 to the 10 and A. Followed then the diamond A, diamond 9, then four spade tricks, giving South game with four tricks in spades, three in diamonds, one in hearts and one in clubs. Of course, if a heart had been led, it would have been set, but the bid of that suit helped cause West to pick the clubs, as so many club bids are based on moth-eaten or short suits.

Farmers Are Elated With Potato Machine

WAYNE, W. Va., Aug. 20. (P)—Wayne county farmers, elated by the state sponsored machine for cleaning and grading potatoes had only one criticism to make: "We didn't get it soon enough."

Potatoes mature early in Wayne and most of the crop had been marketed before the machine, which processes the spuds for sale, arrived.

The Wayne countians were much impressed, however, and many farmers indicated that because of the machine, they expected to increase their potato acreage next year.

The spuds are dumped into a receptacle where they are thoroughly brushed, the "dust" being drawn off by a suction apparatus. Then the potatoes roll across a table with graded openings where they drop into attractive sacks for marketing.

A permanent building will be set aside next year at the new county fairgrounds for the work, it was indicated.

Tuberculosis Tests for Draftees Termed Vital Issue by Physician

LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D., since all my fellow columnists the political field are pointing mistakes of the defense I feel that I am perfectly right in calling attention to a mistake made in the Medical Department of Preparation. All the more so since this column publicly recommended last fall a method which has been recognized as efficient and has stood the test of time in medical practice in large numbers of the population.

X-Ray Recommended
The recommendation was that a recruit, preferably at his home or office, but at any rate as soon as he gets to the induction station, should have an X-ray plate of the chest to determine whether or not there is any tuberculosis present. I pointed out the staggering cost of the acceptance for military duty in the last World War of men who had active tuberculosis at the time they were accepted which was undetected by the examining boards. Under the stress of war conditions these men broke down and became active cases of tuberculosis. Since they had been accepted by the United States, hospitals had to be built for them and many of them are still being cared for at government expense. The exact amount of the cost of these mistakes was millions of dollars.

Ideal Method

Since that time, the method of taking a flat plate (not a fluoroscopic study) has proved to be capable of detecting ninety-five per cent of all cases of tuberculosis in those examined. This method is an ideal one to eliminate those unfit on the grounds of tuberculosis and to save the government from wholesale expenditure in caring for these patients later on.

This procedure, which had all common sense and experience behind it, was not followed out by the draft boards with any regularity. I have been told in most places that draftees were ordered to have an x-ray plate of the chest only when there were suspicious symptoms.

SALLY'S SALLIES

The young woman who does not apologize when you find her at work in the kitchen will not fail to make a good wife.

The objection to the use of the x-ray plate as a routine seems to have been the cost. The cost of caring for tuberculosis soldiers after the war compared with the cost of the x-ray machines is beyond calculation.

The National Tuberculosis Association has now recommended having x-ray examinations of lungs carried out by the local selective service boards on every applicant. Early this year these examinations began to be made. There are, of course, probably thousands of young men already inducted with active tuberculosis which will cost the taxpayers millions of dollars in the future.

Questions and Answers

W. M.: "Could a hardening enlargement and painful lumpiness of the breast be anything other than cancer? This condition started about two years ago, first one breast larger than the other, then the swelling seemed to disappear in the first one, then returned to a larger size, then both breasts enlarged."

Answer: Chronic mastitis causes lumpiness in the breast and is often mistakenly called cancer. You have described a case very well.

WIFE PRESERVERS

A varnished floor, if not too badly worn, may be renovated by rubbing scratches with a rag dipped in linseed oil. If the scratches are too deep, however, they may be sand-papered out, and a new coat of varnish brushed over them. If badly worn, the floor should have as much varnish as possible removed and a fresh coat applied.

The fact that it is in both breasts, and that at one time it got better, and that it has lasted for two years would argue against cancer; however, you should consult a competent surgeon who can make microscopic tests of the tissue involved and give a definite answer.

"Parson of Panamint"
Is Epic of West

Paramount's latest film in western entertainment, "The Parson of Panamint," which comes to the Strand theater today is being hailed as a monument to the American towns that have entered the portals of the sacred order of ghost towns.

For through the magic of the camera, the clock is turned back to the gay nineties when Panamint, a "ghost town" in California, flourished with gold miners, gambling wheels and six-gun smoke. But, unlike most sagas of the old west, "The Parson of Panamint" carries the tale up to current times and reveals the greed and hypocrisy which undermined the life and property of the once-thriving community.

Ellen Drew, assisted by the Guardians, recaptures the gaiety and melody of yesteryear when she sings six of the most popular tunes of our grandfathers' era.

Producer Harry Sherman, film-dom's most eminent authority on westerns, insisted upon filming the story against authentic background props at Panamint, 200 miles from Hollywood. The cast of players chosen by Sherman to portray the vivid characters which Peter B. Kyne drew in his original manuscript, include Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew, Phillip Terry, Joseph Schildkraut, Porter Hall, Henry Kolker, Janet Beecher and Paul Hurst.

New Hardy Picture
Opens Here Tomorrow

Hardy family enthusiasts will have a new picture to cheer about in the latest of the group, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," which opens tomorrow at the Maryland theater for an engagement of seven days.

"Life Begins for Andy Hardy" strikes one of the most important notes ever to be introduced in these pictures, principally the problems that face a youngster upon graduation from high school. Whether to go on to college or go to work is the problem that faces Andy, as it faces so many other youngsters. Andy chose to leave home and work for a month, to thus make a clear decision. What happens when he cuts family ties to go to New York, get a job and go out on his own, makes for one of the most gripping as well as entertaining films of the group.

Mickey Rooney, as Andy, has his best opportunity to date in his transition from the wisecracking, high-stepping small town boy, to a sober, serious young man who discovers that life isn't at all what he had dreamed.

For the third time, Judy Garland appears as guest star with the Hardy Family, recreating her sympathetic role of young Betsy Booth, Andy's guardian angel in time of trouble.

As has been the policy in the past, this Hardy adventure introduces two newcomers, in the persons of Patricia Dane and Ray McDonald. Both youngsters promise to follow in the successful steps of others who have made their debuts with the Hardys.

All of the other favorites are assembled. Lewis Stone is again the sympathetic, understanding Judge Hardy, with Pay Holden as Ma Hardy. Sara Haden appears as Aunt Maud and Ann Rutherford as Polly Benedict.

"Bullets for O'Hara"
Is Crime Thriller

There have been many movies about the underworld, with its accompanying thrills and excitement, but none had so many surprise twists in story as Warner Bros. "Bullets for O'Hara," which is now playing at the Liberty theater. Suspense, adventure and drama all have their share in making this a picture that shouldn't be missed, but above all is its intriguing story of a woman who discovers that she is married to a dangerous criminal. Lovely Joan Perry is cast as the woman who gets into that unenvi-

WORRIED ABOUT ANDY

Pay Holden and Lewis Stone in a scene from the new Hardy Family hit, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," opening tomorrow on the Maryland screen, with Mickey Rooney, of course, in the role of the irrepressible Andy. Having graduated from high school, Andy decides he has now "become a man," and his resultant efforts to become a "captain of industry" create some of the funniest situations yet devised for a Hardy episode. Judy Garland returns to the Hardy fold in the new comedy, and the cast also features two newcomers, Patricia Dane and Ray McDonald.

able situation and Roger Pryor shares honors with her as a detective assigned to bring her husband to justice. Anthony Quinn plays the part of the much sought criminal. When Quinn goes into hiding the police pick up Joan as a suspect and treat her as if she were an accomplice. But she proves herself to be on their side when she agrees to go through with a marriage to Pryor in order to lure Quinn into the open. This proves a very dangerous plan as Quinn comes out of hiding just long enough to kidnap Joan and kill a couple of policemen. The film continues at a rapid pace to a startling climax.

A frantic, hen-pecked banker, three Indians who have invaded his mansion and three phoney Vice Presidents of the United States, are involved in the side-splitting action of "Hurry, Charlie, Hurry," Leon Errol's current laughing feature now showing at the Liberty.

on the stage was with a little concert band in Louisville, Ky., and it wasn't long before New York scouts heard of the farmer boy who was wowing the folks down south.

Arthur Shields and Barry Fitzgerald, who have featured roles in John Ford's Argory production, "The Long Voyage Home," coming today to the Garden theater, are brothers, despite the difference in their names. Both have been members of the Abbey Players for years, and at the start of their careers, adopted different names to avoid confusion.

Variety Is Secret
Alberlson's Success

The acting career of Frank Alberlson is noteworthy because of at least two factors—that it has continued steadily and smoothly for nearly twenty years and that he has escaped the threat of being tagged as a perpetual juvenile.

That 20-year record is especially worthy of comment because it classes Alberlson as a true veteran of the industry despite the fact that he has not yet turned 30. It also is significant that he has passed the dangerous stage of being known simply as "that good looking juvenile" because this is the danger point for any up and coming actor. Many young actors have found their careers nipped in the bud because they failed to survive a series of pictures in which they were cast as personable leading men, with little else to do but look handsome.

Variety seems to be the secret of Alberlson's long-lived, healthy screen career. The actor, who will be seen with Jed Prouty and Lorna Gray in Monogram's "Father Steps Out," which ends today at the Embassy theater, has played practically every sort of picture made in Hollywood.

Million dollar super-specials or 15-chapter serials, it's all the same to Alberlson, who has been cast as everything from newspaper reporters and dashing young millionaires to steppies and bowery bums.

In his list of film credits, for instance, are such box-office successes as "Bachelor Mother," "Navy Blue and Gold," "Fury" and "Room Service." These are but a few of the literally scores of pictures in which he has appeared since his first job in 1922.

In "Father Steps Out," fast-moving comedy drama of a railroad chief, who decides to spend his vacation touring with some friendly fine role. The picture was produced by Lindsay Parsons and directed by Jean Yarbrough. Joseph West wrote the screenplay, with additional dialogue by Edmond Kelso.

Stock Leaders Generally Emerge With Gains and Losses Balanced

Dealings Are Sluggish Throughout; Transfers Total 390, 340 Shares

By BERNARD S. O'HARA
NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (P)—It was another photographic finish for the stock market today as leaders generally emerged with minor gains and losses about evenly balanced.

Dealings were sluggish throughout. Transfers of 390,340 shares were among the smallest for a full session this year. They compared with 404,760 the day before.

Motors did better as manufacturers felt the use of substitutes for materials commandeered by defense works might enable them to maintain production at higher levels than some had expected.

Stocks ending on the upside included Lehigh Valley Coal Preferred, American Can, General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Edison, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, Boeing, United Aircraft, Cenco De Pasco, Du Pont, Standard Oil (N.J.), Texas Corp. and Union Carbide.

In the losing division were United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, United States Rubber

Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Western Union, Santa Fe, Anaconda, American Smelting, Eastman Kodak and Westinghouse.

In a listless curb advances were retained by Brewster Aero, McWilliams Dredging, Phoenix Securities and Todd Shipyards. In arrears were Glen Alden Coal, Bell Aircraft and Columbia Oil and Gas. Trading here amounted to about 65,000 shares versus 66,000 yesterday.

Rails and industrials leaned to the office in today's bond market while other principal groups steered a steady course with trading light in all departments.

Scattered offerings among rails brought declines of fractions to a point and in some cases more to such issues as Burlington 3 1/2, Illinois Central 5 1/2, Erie 3 1/2, North-western 4 1/2, Santa Fe 4 1/2, Missouri Pacific 5 1/2 and Northern Pacific 4 1/2. Gulf, Mobile and Northern 5 1/2 yielded 4 at 89 on a few sales.

United States Governments moved narrowly on both the stock exchange and over the counter with the trend mixed on both markets.

Total sales of $4,827,800, par value, compared with $4,485,900 on Monday.

efforts in behalf of practical child training have been well worthwhile. Hostess was Miss Florence Shaw, supervisor of directed teaching at Shepherd State Teachers college. Among the guests numbering more than twenty-five were several who had done actual work in building the neat little "two-story" stone building which is anything but a playhouse, although it looks like one. In 1928, college officials found they had approximately $1,000 left over from a general improvement fund. Just who suggested construction of the "Little House" is uncertain, but stone-by-stone the building went up on the campus back of the gymnasium. Since then scores of Shepherdstown children have carried out various projects at the "Little House" under the supervision of adults trained in child leadership.

Teaching Moral Value of Saving Is Parents' Duty

Dr. Myers Says Now Is the Time To Invest in Better Health

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

When the federal tax program and the wider defense program, get under way many parents will be forced to cut on expenditures for luxuries. Until then, some parents with better incomes than they had been accustomed to will be tempted to spend lavishly on things they don't need.

Many girls will wear finer clothes and many boys will buy cars on the installment plan. All too many parents will be giving their teen age boys and girls added money for good times.

Encouraged by their children, a good many parents will spend their extra earnings without much restraint or thought about the future. What is needed right now in the United States is a leadership among parents in economy and thrift; self-discipline in self-interests not immediately required of them.

Any parent who will reason knows very well that drain and depressing days lie ahead for him and his children and grandchildren. Acting wisely he will put money aside from every pay check before any of it is spent or contracted for.

Self Denial

The most important value from any such self-denial by parents and children who have comparative abundance now is not in having something laid aside for lean years ahead. The really important values from doing so will be hidden inside these self-disciplined parents and their children. These unseen, intangible spiritual values are investments which will surely bear rich dividends in days to come.

Now we need to invest in health, in medical and dental care; also in self-improvement.

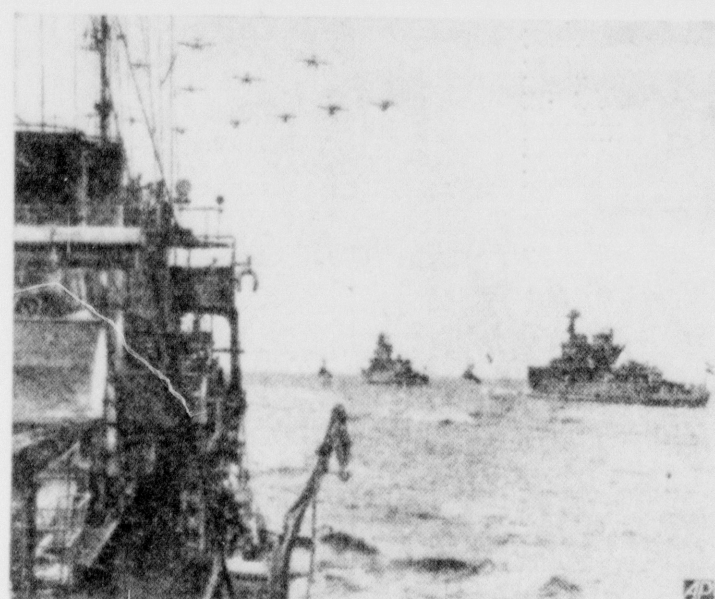

Now is the time for boys and girls to continue in the public schools, and for those who have left school too soon to go back. Now is the time for adults as well as youths, parents as well as children, to keep on learning to set themselves to a plan of serious reading and study, to attend night school and, where no such school is available, to take home study courses from reliable correspondence schools.

Saving Desirable

How I wish I might persuade many young people now on jobs with good pay to invest a reasonable portion of their earnings in self-improvement. Any who will do so will while gaining skills and knowledge also gain what is worth still more immeasurable improvement in their moral character.

A selected list of good books for the teen aged and older youths to read for pleasure and profit may be had without cost, by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street.

HOW FORMIDABLE IS DUTCH FLEET?

As fleets go, the Dutch Asiatic fleet is not formidable, but in "guerrilla" sea war, dodging in and about the Indies islands, it could be a thorn in almost any enemy's flank. Its strength is uncertain. Best estimates reckon it at three cruisers, eight to twelve destroyers, more than forty torpedo boats, eighteen or twenty submarines and numerous smaller craft. Besides the fleet, the Dutch have a small, respectable army in the Indies, and an air force equipped with some U. S. planes.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you advise a person to take a correspondence course if a similar course is offered by a school or college within reach of his home?

A. No; by all means attend the school or college.

Q. If you were a parent who could speak a non-English language well, would you teach this language to your children?

A. I certainly would, after the age of three or four. Why rob him of the opportunity to speak two languages instead of just one? Why keep him from appreciation of the cultural backgrounds of his forebears? And why rob him and yourself of a comradeship hardly acquired so well in any other way?

Marie Bashkirtseff, Russian author, died at 23. A clause in her will said: "I die absolutely pure of heart, mind and body. I believe I have never had thoughts that were base, mercenary or depraved."

J. D. Robertson Will Succeed Laird as Mayor

President of Lonaconing Council To Fill Unexpired Term

LONACONING, Aug. 19—Due to the sudden death of Mayor D. Robertson, J. D. Robertson, veteran councilman and president of the Lonaconing City council will fill the unexpired term of the deceased mayor.

Mayor Laird was stricken at the local Presbyterian church, after he had participated in an exhibition on the Main street in front of the church property. He died shortly after being stricken. Mr. Laird was a native of this place, having been born here in 1875, and was the son of the late Joseph and Anne Laird. He was connected with the mines in this section all his life. He was a member of the Knights and Pythias and the local Presbyterian church.

He made his first venture into political circles a number of years ago when he was elected to the city council. He was elected mayor in 1936 when he returned to political activities after a lapse of more than ten years. He was Lonaconing's fourteenth mayor and was starting his sixth term, having served five consecutive terms.

As a city politician Mr. Laird was strictly for the welfare of the town. He was the guiding light in securing the NYA building on Jackson street. The building will become the property of the city in event the NYA removes from this place. This was one of the clauses which Mayor Laird insisted upon in the agreement for the protection of the town lands which went into the project. He had numerous streets improved during his terms in office.

A member of the Goodwill Fire company, No. 1, he served as treasurer for many years and took an active part in all the activities of the organization of which he is one of the oldest members.

Mr. Robertson, president of the council will probably take the office of mayor for the unexpired term at the next meeting of the officials at a special meeting to be called at the near future.

Besides his widow, Mayor Laird is survived by one son, Galen, and two daughters, Mrs. Mary Love, Mrs. James Torbet, Cumberland, Mrs. Anne Dash and Mrs. Maudie Dixon, Charleston, Pa., and one brother, Robert Laird, Watertown, Conn.

Funeral services will be held Thursday.

Lonaconing stores will be closed from 2 to 4 p. m. Thursday for the funeral of Mayor Laird.

DiMaggio Injured as Yanks, Tigers Divide

Sprained Ankle To Keep Slugger Out of Lineup

New Yorkers Capture Nightcap 8-3 after Losing Opener 12-3

DETROIT, Aug. 19 (AP)—The New York Yankees came to grief today, not so much by dividing a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers, as by losing their great batting and fielding star, Joe DiMaggio, with a sprained ankle.

The Tigers scored eight runs in an unrestrained second inning in the first game to win 12 to 3 and then knocked back their opponent in the second game to win 8 to 3.

The victory in the second game, however, was small recompense for the injury of DiMaggio, who turned his left ankle while rounding second after hitting a double in the fourth inning.

No bones were believed broken, but he was taken to Harper hospital for X-rays and will be out of the lineup for several days. Until today he had played every inning of every game this year, but his fragile legs preserved his unwanted record of never yet having played full schedule for the Yankees.

In the first game Lefty Hal Newhouser kept the bombers well muffled on five hits. One of them was Charley Keller's thirtieth home run in the second inning. The scores:

DETROIT, Aug. 19 (AP)—The New York Yankees came to grief today, not so much by dividing a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers, as by losing their great batting and fielding star, Joe DiMaggio, with a sprained ankle.

The victory in the second game, however, was small recompense for the injury of DiMaggio, who turned his left ankle while rounding second after hitting a double in the fourth inning.

No bones were believed broken, but he was taken to Harper hospital for X-rays and will be out of the lineup for several days. Until today he had played every inning of every game this year, but his fragile legs preserved his unwanted record of never yet having played full schedule for the Yankees.

In the first game Lefty Hal Newhouser kept the bombers well muffled on five hits. One of them was Charley Keller's thirtieth home run in the second inning. The scores:

Rainy Week Keeps Temperature Down

Precipitation for Five Days Is 1.87 Inches; Average Temperature Is 80

Twenty-five hundredths of an inch of rain fell yesterday during the eight-hour period between 8 a. m. and 4 p. m., increasing the precipitation for the past two days to .80 inches and for the month of August to 1.87 inches.

All of the rain that has fallen this month has been during the past nine days, following an eleven-day dry period from July 30 to August 19, inclusive.

The present rainy spell started on August 11 with a reading of .29 inches and was followed on August 15, with .74 inches, August 16, .04 inches, August 18, .55 inches and August 19, .25 inches.

Yesterday temperature of seventy degrees was the lowest maximum for this month. The lowest minimum of forty-six degrees was recorded on August 6.

During the first ten days of the month the mercury soared into the ninety degree circle nine times. Since August 11, however, it has failed to pass eighty-seven degrees. The average has been eighty degrees for the past week.

Precipitation for the first nineteen days in August is far below the two previous months. Rainfall here in July was 4.94 inches and in June 5.78 inches.

The present month is unlike August, 1940, when a prolonged heat wave twice sent the mercury past the century mark.

NEW INCINERATOR READY—Built at a cost of approximately $5,000 by the City of Cumberland, the new incinerator, used for cremating dead animals and burning rubbish, and located about three fourths of a mile off the Oldtown road, will go into operation next week, according to Charles F. Heller, who supervised the construction of the two-story concrete block building. The main furnace is twelve feet, eight inches wide, fourteen feet long and contains an arch six feet in height, lined with Mt. Savage fire brick. To the right is the thirty-five foot brick stack which has a circular fire brick interior. The damper system is Heller's own idea and heat is regulated by the contraction atop the stack instead of below. The building contains a large coal bin of twenty-five tons capacity and water is supplied by a gravity system from a 1,000 gallon tank located on a bank outside the structure. The new incinerator replaces the one that had been in operation in the Lindnerville section about twenty years.

Camden Avenue Project Finished By City Workers

Blacktopped Street Will Be Opened to Vehicular Traffic Today

A street construction job which started out as a city sponsored WPA project was completed yesterday by city street department workers under the supervision of Charles P. Heller.

Camden avenue, from Fayette street to Highland avenue, received its final coat of blacktop and after the roller had completed its work, Heller announced that the street will be opened to vehicular traffic today at 7 a. m.

WPA workers built the sidewalks, gutters and curbs on Camden avenue several months ago and then the job was deserted when the men were transferred to the Cumberland municipal airport project in Wiley Ford, W. Va.

After numerous complaints from residents, the city agreed to finish the 1,600 foot project.

City workers laid a six inch stone base and finished the street with a one and a half inch covering of blacktop.

Power Shovels Banned
Heller said that the city will prohibit the running of any type of power shovel over the new street under its own power. Shovels must be transported by trailers as they have done much damage to other city streets.

Camden avenue is one of the fastest growing residential sections in Cumberland and many new homes have been built there in the past year.

Another improvement in the same section of town was inaugurated yesterday when a force of men under Heller started a fifty foot extension of the Fayette street storm sewer in the rear of the Lashley property.

Start Sewer Line
Work also was started yesterday on the Kent avenue sewer line. One thousand feet of pipe will be laid to connect up with the new homes to be built there. One new dwelling has been completed, one is under construction and eight more are to be built in the near future, Heller said.

Cotton and Ticking Being Distributed For Mattresses

Distribution of cotton and ticking material for making mattresses is being made by the county home demonstration agent's office to persons in the lower income groups who have applied for these items.

Last night material was distributed from the Oldtown high school while Thursday night the materials will be given out at Flintstone high school and on Monday, August 25, the cotton and ticking will be on hand at the Piney Plains school for those who signed up for the project.

City Does Not Need "Smoke Screen" James C. Shriver Declares in Talk

Asks Citizens To Enroll in Crusade for Smoke Elimination

"The United States Navy uses smoke screens to conceal the movement of its ships but smoke screens in Cumberland are not necessary to conduct our commercial and industrial activity, nor are they required as a means of concealing our daily activities," James C. Shriver, postmaster, declared last night over radio station WTBO in a program sponsored by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

"Yet we have become so accustomed to our daily smoke screen that we are inclined to accept it as a necessary evil," Shriver said. There was a time when people faced epidemics of smallpox and typhoid fever with the same attitude, Cumberland had its epidemics which took the usual toll of life when they broke out. They ran their course, leaving sorrowing hearts—only to return again in the following years. But courageous bacteriologists, doctors with inquiring minds and the utmost patience, tackled the problems so that today such epidemics are rare, and when they do break out are usually quickly controlled, he added.

Smoke Indicates Waste
"Research work and study have shown that coal can be consumed and power produced without the customary smoke screen. As a matter of fact, combustion engineers will tell you smoke indicates poor firing. It indicates wasteful firing, and that it is the economical thing to do to eliminate it if for no other reason."

"We have no means of estimating the damage done in Cumberland by (Continued on Page 6, Col. 4)

FATHER KELLY IS ABLE TO LEAVE HOSPITAL HERE

The Rev. Father William E. Kelly, pastor of St. John's Catholic church, Westminster, who was slightly injured Sunday night in a three-way automobile accident on Martin's mountain, seven miles east of Cumberland, was discharged from Allegheny hospital yesterday.

His aunt, Mrs. Bridget T. Logsdon, 68, of 108 Columbia street, suffered possible chest injuries in the crash and was admitted to the hospital for observation. Her son, Joseph Logsdon, who was driving the car in which they were riding, escaped injury.

An east-bound car is said to have struck a west-bound machine directly in front of the car driven by young Logsdon. The latter swung to the extreme edge of the road and stopped but the east-bound car after hitting the auto in front, crashed against the machine in which Father Kelly was riding.

The Rev. Father Kelly was en route to Westernport where he planned to attend a funeral Monday. He recently underwent a major operation in Baltimore, and has not been driving a car during his convalescence.

City Completes $5,000 Incinerator On Oldtown Road

Charles F. Heller Devises New Damper System for 35-foot Stack

Completion of the city's new $5,000 incinerator, located off the Oldtown road, was announced yesterday by Charles F. Heller, supervisor of local construction projects, who stated that the furnace will be in full operation next week.

The two-story building housing the incinerator is twenty-five feet wide and thirty-two feet long and is constructed of concrete block with a sheet metal roof. Adjoining the building is a thirty-five foot red brick stack with a circular interior built of fire brick.

Heller Devises Control
Heat is regulated from the top of the stack by a new damper system which is Heller's own idea.

The main furnace for incinerating purposes, such as the cremation of dead animals and the burning of rubbish, is twelve feet, eight inches wide and fourteen feet long and contains an arch six feet high lined with fire brick. In the furnace room is located a large coal bin with a capacity of twenty-five tons.

Water will be supplied to the building by means of a gravity system from a 1,000 gallon tank on a bank near the building. Rain water passing from the spouting into the tank enters the building through a service line into the basement.

The stack was built by William J. Smith, local bricklayer.

Replaces Old Building
The new building supplants the old city incinerator which was located on Willow Brook road and Pine avenue for twenty years and was recently torn down. Mayor Harry Irvin said that the old structure was razed when the city realized that it would cost almost as much to repair it as it would to erect an incinerator in a more suitable location.

Board Sustains Orr's Action in Smallwood Case

Civil Service Group Upholds Police Head in Dismissing Patrol Driver

A decision handed down yesterday by the Cumberland Civil Service Board sustained the action taken by James Orr, police and fire commissioner, in dismissing John W. Smallwood, patrol driver from the Cumberland Police Department, on charges of "conduct unbecoming an officer."

Mayor Harry Irvine last evening stated that he received notification that the board, comprising Jesse W. Korns, chairman, Elmer R. Kough and Clifton E. Fuller, voted unanimously to uphold the action taken by the local police commissioner on Thursday, July 31.

Small, who has been a member of the police department for twenty years, was given a hearing by the board on Wednesday, August 13, at the city hall, and final decision on the case was withheld until yesterday when the mayor was informed of the verdict.

The local police officer was dismissed on charges of selling a bicycle, which belonged to the city, to Glenn Isner, of Ridgeley, W. Va., for $5 on July 24.

Commissioner Orr said that action of the board is final and there is no recourse for Smallwood to take to regain his job. Orr added that Smallwood had been suspended on three previous occasions while a member of the local police department.
